FLORIDA BARS LEASE

CONVICT LEASE SYSTEM BANNED

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. April 27—The state legislature today passed a bill abolishing the county convict lease system in Florida

A measure already passed by the state senate was adopted by the lower house, together with an amendment doing away with corporal punishment in county convict camps

The state senate at the same time debated for two hours on the house amendment calling for a ban on corporal punishment.

Senator J. P. Stokes, chairman of the legislative committee which investigated the death of Martin Tabert, Dakota youth, in a convict camp after a flogging, made a stirring plea for abolition of the whipping system.

"There is no hell hot enough to burn the man who wielded the lash on Tabert," he declared.

DRY OFFICIALS FACING TROUBLE

WASHINGTON, April 27—Troubles were piled high on the desks of prohibition enforcement officials here today

While Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair pushed a probe of bribery charges against present and former prohibition agents, and cabinet officials pondered ways to curb rum smuggling. Probition Commissioner Haynes was engaged in debating with Roscoe C. Andrews, suspended prohibition director of Illinois, the causes that led to his suspension

News came from Chicago that seven men involved in the Grommes and Ulrich case, which brought trouble to Andrews, after he had issued permits freeing $500,000 worth of liquor from bonded warehouses to homes of the company's stockholders has been indicted by a grand jury

Official advices from Pittsburgh notified Haynes that William Kelton, former group head of federal prohibition officers was sent to jail for a year and two agents for ten months each. They were convicted of conspiracy to sell 2,000 barrels of confiscated beer.

William McConnell, former federal dry director for Pennsylvania was on trial in Philadelphia with twenty-eight others for alleged connection with the forging of permits which illegally freed 30,000 galoins of liquor from the Stewart distillery at Baltimore

Haynes had on his desk the resignation of Conrad W Austin, special prohibition agent, who was recently sent to Alabama to investigate the conditions following the suspension of the acting state director and three agents. Austin alleged that Haynes had "called him off" after he had struck some hot trails Haynes denied that he had done this, declaring that Austin had completed the preliminary work he was sent to do and the investigation has been turned over to the intelligence service of the internal revenue bureau.

Rumors were revived here today of srious discord between Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair and Commissioner Haynes over methods of prohibition enforcement. Haynes is known to have been rebuffed by his chiefs in the matter of the New Jersey dry chief appointment.

JOHNSON MAY BE CANDIDATE

TO BE URGED TO FIGHT HARDING FOR NOMINATION.

Has Told Republican Senators, However, That He Will Not Run Unless He Has Chance to Beat President.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Senator Hiram Johnson will be urged on his return from Europe to fight President Harding for the republican presidential nomination in 1924.

Johnson probably will refuse.

Leaders of the isolationist group in the senate and outside of it are getting ready to put Johnson in the strongest terms at their command what they call an "imperative necessity," that he run on a platform of "keeping the United States out of Europe." The issue, they will tell him, has been made to order for him, and President Harding himself has made it.

Johnson told leading republican senators before he left fo rhis European vacation that he would not be a candidate unless there was some chance of beating Mr. Harding.

But now Johnson's friends here don't see how he can stay out of the race. They profess to believe that Johnson's candidacy would command the coveted support of many influential republicans who are angry and sore in spirit because of Mr. Harding's attitude, not only on the world court, but on other matters, notably federal patronage.

Johnson would get, the handlers of his presidential boom claim, the support of the anti-Hughes and anti-Hoover republicans, of whom there are many. Seldom has a high administration official been the object of so much bitterness within the party as Secretary Hughes. The word dislike does not adequately express the attitude of many republicans, some of them in high places. They have been kept silent only by their party loyalty and their strong friendship for President Harding. The antipathy to Hoover is scarcely less vigorous.

Senate Does Not Care to Outlaw Cars Capable of Thirty Miles or More an Hour.

The state senate indulged in a little house cleaning Friday preparatory to final adjournment which may come sometime before the middle of next week.

R. 525 was placed on general file. It appropriates $14,000 for the education of children in the state home for dependent children, or to pay their tuition in public schools.

ELLIOTT CHENEY TESTIFIES

Supporting Opposition to Proposed Capital Beach Dam, He Tells of Old Conditions.

Elliott J. Cheney, holder of extensive property near Capital Beach, testified for the plaintiffs Friday forenoon in the injunction suit of Tillman Flader and others against the Capital Beach people, in which the plaintiffs seek to enjoin the building of a proposed dam across Oak creek to raise the level of the water in the creek.

Mr Cheney testified that prior to the digging of the canal that straightened out Oak creek and cut off some of its wanderings west of the Capital Beach lake the land in that vicinity had not raised any good crops for seven years; that in his opinion, to stop the waterflow and raise the water in the creek would make the land sour and boggy again

Mr Cheney offered a bit of gratuitous suggestion to the Capital Beach owners' attorney He said that if they would let the lake fill up with mud they would have farm land that would be worth more to them than the lake.

The plaintiffs had not rested their case at noon Friday when Judge Morning's court was adjourned The case will be carried over until next week on account of juvenile court work.

BOVINE BILL IS APPROVED

SENATE FOR APPROPRIATING $285,000 FOR ERADICATION.

Only Five Votes Registered in Favor of Indefinitely Postponing House Measure Continuing the Work.

Only five senators, all democrats, stood by the governor Friday morning, when a vote was taken on the motion to indefinitely postpone H. R 668, which appropriates $285,000 for continuing the tuberculosis eradication work. These were Gumb, Osborne, Reifenrath, Tomek, and Thielen. In favor of the bill were cast twenty-two votes, three of which were cast by democrats.

Benning, senate leader for the democrats, voted for the appropriation, as did Purcell and Shallenberger, democrats. Fries and Smrha, the remaining democrats, were absent, as were also four republicans, Meacham, McGowan, Wiltse and Wilkins.

Osborne thought that as the big maintenance appropriation billl carried the same item, this bill was unnecessary an dthat it would save a little money if killed now.

Reed explained that the situation demanded that his bill be passed up to the governor, and that this would leave it possible to cut it out of the appropriation bill, against which some votes might be cast were it left in and which votes would be for it with it out.

The bill will come up for third reading during the afternoon, and will be passed An opinion has been asked of the attorney general as to whether, since it received three-fifths of the votes in each house, the governor can veto it. A still more important question is what will the governor do with H R. 584, which directs how the fund shall be administered. If he vetoes this after the legislature adjourns, if it quits before five days are up, he can refuse to spend the money or do any of the eradication work

ON TRAIL OF BOND FRAUDS

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION GATHERS MUCH EVIDENCE.

Keeler Brothers of Denver Charged With Fraud in Connection With Handling Nebraska School Bonds.

Alleged frauds in the purchase of bonds from various Nebraska school districts were the subject of evidence given before Trial Examiner Edward M. Averill and Attorney G. E. Rowland of the federal trade commission, in a hearing which began April 20 and was to close Friday evening. The commission brought charges against Keeler Brothers of Denver in connection with some of its transactions of 1919 and 1920, alleging fraud against their competitors, the school districts concerned, and the public, and in some instances forgery. Should the commission find against Keeler Brothers, on the evidence submitted, the firm would be enjoined from such practices, on pain of laying itself open to prosecution.

One of the instances involved in that is that of the $140,000 bond issue sold by Waverly, school district 145, in 1919. The interest was to be payable annually and the bonds carried an option providing for retiring them on any interest date after five years, the full term being twenty-five years. These details appear in the history of the bonds prepared for the board by Judge Lincoln Frost. The history filed with the state auditor by Keeler Brothers, however, shows that the interest was payable semi-annually and no provision was made for their retirement before twenty-five years. The evidence indicates that this came about as follows:

Keeler Brothers had the bonds printed, and also the purported history of the issue, and sent J. H. Good to Waverly to have them signed by the trustees. He arrived at 6 o'clock and summoned the other hastily, saying he must get out of town by 10 o'clock with the 280 bonds duly signed. When one of the trustees evinced an inclination to glance over a bond and the attached history, he protested, saying they were in serial order and should not be mixed up, and that they could lose no time if the job were to be completed in time for him to make his train. Accordingly the bonds and history were all signed by the trustees, and it was not until they were called on for the first interest payment that they discovered the discrepancies between the bonds they had advertised and been authorized to issue, and the bonds sold by Keeler Brothers to various purchasers. The changes made by the brokers rendered the bonds more salable. A few of the bonds were re-purchased by the trustees and cancelled, but the volume of them is in the hands of innocent purchasers, and the commission is advised that these cannot be penalized.

The fraud against competitors of Keeler Brothers, who included several Omaha and Lincoln trust companits, lay in the fact, the examiner points out, that their bids were lower than they would have been had the bonds authorized been in accordance with the history on which Keeler Brothers afterward sold them, and they did not have a fair chance to compete.

When this case came to light, other districts that had dealt with Keeler Brothers began to investigate, and those whose complaints were heard this week in Lincoln include Bennet district No. 8; district No. 165 in Gage county; Mead, where forgery is also charged in connection with a $130,000 issue; Barneston, where forgery is indicated in addition to the same frauds as alleged at Waverly; Valparaiso in connection with a $59,000 issue; Plainview, where a $60,000 issue was altered; and Laurel, where a $20,000 issue of funding bonds was altered.

T. J. Pickett, publisher of the Wahoo Wasp, testified that he had never signed the affidavit attached to the proof of publication of the Mead bonds, and that his name had been forged to the affidavit included in the history. Evidence indicated that the names of three school trustees had probably been forged to the history of the Barneston bonds. There are four or five other Nebraska cases to be taken up later, Mr. Averill said.

Evidence in these cases will be transmitted to Washington and the decision of the federal trade commission published there and also sent to Denver and probably to Lincoln also Mr. Averill and Mr. Rowland will leave Saturday for Salt Lake City.

LEGISLATORS ON VACATION

GO TO OMAHA AS GUESTS OF THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Decline, However, to Take Rest on Saturday Regardless of Whether or Not There Is Need of It.

Members of the legislature folded up their tents Friday afternoon and biked to Omaha, the guests of the chamber of commerce and the Douglas delegation. Representative Hughes told members of the house to be on the platform prior to 4:30 to receive free transportation and to be loaded into a pair of coaches.

"Have you made arrangements to put us on the train coming back?" asked the speaker.

Whether or not they may need a rest after the big night planned for them in the metropolis, members declined to adjourn Friday until Monday. They voted strong to return to the business of legislating at 9 a. m. Saturday. It was suggested that in order to hasten the end, there be a Sunday session.

"I'm not an angel, but I never work on Sunday, and I'm not going to begin now," said Vance.

"I'll be with you tomorrow but not on Sunday," said Mitchell.

While Mr. Hughes announced that two special coaches have been chartered to take the members to Omaha, he did not specify the number of cars engaged to bring them back.

Democratic members of the house finance committee were somewhat grieved to know that the speaker, in selecting a democrat for the house half of the conference committee on the appropriation bill, had ignored the four minority men of the house standing group. He named two republicans who are on the finance committee and then selected C. L. Yochum of Otoe as the democratic member.

Attention also was called to the fact that Messrs. Mears and Burke, named on the conference group, are from the same congressional district. In answer to this more or less scattered comment, Speaker Mathers said:

"I selected fair-minded men and have no apologies to offer It did not even occur to me at the time that Mr. Burke is on the finance committee of the house. As chairman of that committee, Mr. Mears was entitled to be of the conference. I think it a splendid committee."

The speaker admitted that sixteen or more men and factions discussed the matter of appointments with him. He was, however, governed entirely, he said, by fitness of the men to serve.

Trotsky spoke at the meeting of the Voluntary Air Fleet Society urging expansion of the govenment air force.

"There is a difference between our positions in isolation," he said. "The isolation of the United States is voluntary but we are isolated because the capitalistic countries hate us

"But with all this hatred surrounding our nation, our soviet will not be broken down

"We will build up a strong air force and conquer the air as we have conquered the ground we are standing on"

A WIFE GETS BIG VERDICT

PLAINTIFF IN STOCKER CASE IS AWARDED $33,333.34.

Amount of Damages Assessed Against Mrs. Harriett Stocker by Jury Said to Be Largest Given in Nebraska.

The sum of $33,333.34 was awarded Mrs. Thomas R P. Stocker in a verdict returned by the jury Friday morning against Mrs. Harriett Stocker, for alleged alienation of the affections of the plaintiff's husband, who is the defendant's son. This was said by attorneys to be the largest verdict they remember of in an alienation case tried in Nebraska.

The jury was retired shortly after the mid-afternoon recess Thursday. At 7:30 p. m. they agreed upon a verdict which was sealed and kept until court convened Friday morning.

The plaintiff in the case alleged that her mother-in-law took an intense dislike to her son after her marriage to the defendant's son, Thomas R. P. Stocker, and by alleged verbal assaults, striking her, and the use of harsh and unrefined language toward her, caused her to leave home; that the defendant threatened to disinherit her son if he followed his wife and established a separate home. That such a procedure caused an estrangement between the plaintiff and her husband, and the mother prevailed upon her son to sue for divorce.

The court instructed the jury that an ante-nuptial agreement on the part of an intended bride to live at the home of the parents of her intended husband is terminated by the marriage by law. That any advice given by the mother to her son, if given in good faith, and with a view to his welfare, did not constitute an alienation of affections, and the plaintiff could not recover.

It was also stated by Judge Shepherd in his instructions that in no case counld the jury give punitive or exemplary damages, as the laws of Nebraska do not permit it.

The court instructed the jury that before the plaintiff could recover damages she would have to prove that the alienation occurred as stated; that it was caused by wrongful acts of the defendant, and not in good faith. That a parent has a right to advise a son to separate from his wife and procure a divorce if she has reason to believe, that grounds for a separation and divorce exist.

The contention of the defendant in the case that that the estrangement of Thomas Stocker and Gussie Stocker occurred when the plaintiff left her husband's home in July, 1921, for a visit to her parents in Auburn, intending to return, and later changed her mind and refused to return.

Mr. Stocker said be believed that his wife was disloyal to him after she went home to Auburn in July, 1921, and allowed her relatives to influence her against him; that he wanted the matter settled, believing that she did not love him any more, and finally lost his love for her when she filed an affidavit in her counteraction to his divorce suit, in which she alleged that she was without means to live, or carry on her legal action. He said he knew this affidavit was not true, because, he alleged, his wife had an income at that time. He testified that his mother's acts had nothing to do with alienating his affections for his wife.

Thomas Stocker said Friday morning that in his opinion the verdict was excessive, and that a motion for a new trial would be filed. He said that in case the new trial is denied, an appeal would be made to the supreme court.

The full extent of Mrs Harriett Stocker's property was not disclosed during the trial. She has property in Auburn, a home on P street in Lincoln, a farm in Lancaster county, and property in England, according to statements made Friday.

The jury arrived at the unusual sum in the verdict by taking an average of all the sums suggested in the last ballot, according to a rumor. Some of the jurors, it was said, wanted to award the full $50,000 asked by the plaintiff, while others thought $20,000 would be enough. After the average had been reached, it was said, the jurors decided that the sum so deducted would be a fair verdict.

C. B. Short, 2777 California Court, was foreman of the jury. The other members were:

Albert Ward, Denton
John Bruns, Lincoln, R. F. D. N
Claude L. Morrison, 2426 Park Ave

SIFTERS GET INSTRUCTION

TOLD BY HOUSE MAJORITY TO REPORT OUT FRIES' BILL.

This Provides That Cities of Over Five Thousand in State May Have Muny Coal Yards and Ice Plants.

The house sifting committee aws told by fifty-nine members of that body that it should report out for consideration S. F. 54, the Fries bill which authorizes cities of 5,000 to 25,000 population, to finance and operate municipal coal yards and ice plants if they wish to do so.

Axtell made the motion to instruct. He said the bill had been raised by the house and put on the general file after the standing committee had given it the chloroform, and now the sifters refused to raise it. He thought the people of the cities ought to have this right to exercise if they chose.

Originally Mr. Fries wanted all cities of over a thousand to have this power, but the senate put the limit at 5,000, and this leaves about twelve cities that, if this becomes a law, will be possessed of such authority.

Strehlow said the sifters were suppressing the bill, and that this was no part of their duty Lamb opposed raising the bill on the ground that he was wearied of helping out the cities when there was not much of a disposition to help the country, as was shown by the refusal to exempt the farmers' districts formed for giving cheaper light, from taxation.

The speaker ruled that it would take sixty votes to force the hand of the sifting committee, as it involved a change of the rules. Osterman said the speaker was honest in his interpretation, but not previous speaker speaker had so ruled. A call of the house brought in nearly enough to get the necessary sixty, and at this time the speaker said that if this was intended merely as an instruction to the committee he would hold that fifty-one votes would be enough. Mr. Axtell said that it was merely telling the committee that the house wanted the bill brought out, and that it had the right to do as it pleased. The motion was then declared carried.

Those who voted to have the bill brought out were: Auten, Axtell, Baldridge, Ball, Barbour, Beushausen, Bock, Brown, G. B. Collins, G. S. Collins, Colman, Davis of Fillmore, Dennis, Dutcher, Egger, Elsasser, Ernst, Gallagher, Garber Gilmore ordan, Hardin, Haycock, Heffernan, Hyde, Jacoby, Johnson, Keck, Kendall, Mears, Mitchell, Moore, Morgan, Neff, Nelson, O'Malley, O'Gara, Osterman, Otteman, Peterson, Pollard, Raasch, Reece, Reran, Reynolds, Smith, Strehlow, Svoboda Thatcher, Thomssen, Timme, Vance, Wells, Whitehead, Wilson of Dawes Wingett Wise, Mr. Speaker 59

Nays Allen Amspoker Bailey, Belding, Broome Davis of Cass, Densmore Donnelly, Dyball, Dysart, Essam Green, Hall, Hansen, Harrington, Hughes, Johnston Keifer, Keyes, Lamb McCain, Miner, North, Parkinson, Rourke, Smith Staats, Stibal, Wilson of Lancaster Wood, Yochum of Otoe, Yochum of Saunders —32

When Mr Lamb was protesting against the motion he declared that it was unfair for a United States senator, referring to R B Howell, to stand out in the lobby and advise members to vote against his anti tax exemption bill.

GIRL DROPS CHARGES AGAINST BABE RUTH

Said By Swat King's Lawyer To Have Confessed It a "Frame-Up"

HAD SUED PLAYER FOR $50,000

Alleged He Was aFther of Her Unborn Child.

MAY LOOK FOR "HIGHER-UPS"

No Move Will Be Taken in Inquiry, However, Until Ruth Himself Is Consulted in the Matter.

NEW YORK, April 27.—At a conference in Boston tonight Babe Ruth and his attorney, Hyman Bushel, will decide whether to go any further with the case of Dolores Dixon, who dropped her $50,000 suit against the home run king today.

Miss Dixon has signed a paper in which she admits her charge that Ruth attacked her was a "frameup," according to Bushel.

Bushel stated he desired to confer with Ruth before deciding whether to take any further action toward ferreting out those who are believed to have "arranged" the girl's suit, using her as a tool

The suit was dropped just as Robert McChesney was about to go on the witness stand before a supreme court justice and give testimony concerning the circumstances under which the suit was planned. Bushel said McMhesney who used to live in the same house with Miss Dixon, heard details arranged.

Bushel said that McChesney would remain in New York for the time being, ready to tell his story to the proper authorities if desired. He also said he was ready to turn over all his evidence to officials if it is decided to demand an investigation of the alleged plot back of the suit. When the suit was filed the girl charged Ruth had attacked her at various times and places; that he was the father of her unborn child.

Investigation might lead to important revelations with regard to the individuals who instigated the girl's action.

No additional steps will be taken, however, until Ruth is consulted.

EDGAR DUNCAN IS WITNESS

Testifies in the Damage Suit of Oscar Enslow Against C. H. Frey, Florist.

Edgar Duncan was a witness for the plaintiff Friday morning in district court in the suit of Oscar Enslow against C. H. Frey, in which the plaintiff asks $2,500 judgment for an alleged violation on the part of the defendant to live up to an agreement.

Mr. Enslow claims that he sold his floral business and stock of fixtures to Mr. Frey for a consideration which included a cash payment of $1,500, plus the future delivery to the plaintiff of $2,500 worth of stock in the C. H. Frey Floral corporation, which the plaintiff claims Mr. Frey agreed to incorporate. Mr. Enslow claimed that all the agreement was lived up to but the incorporation of the floral company and the delivery of stock.

Mr. Duncan testified to corroborate Mr. Enslow's contentions, and said that he believed such an agreement was made as touching the incorporation of the floral company. He presented a purported contract, by which the terms of the agreement were explained, and by effect of which C. H. Frey was to be president of the company.

Mr. Enslow claims that instead of forming the floral corporation, Mr. Frey sold his flower business to Irwin Frey.

MAYOR WAS NOT INVITED

Says He Got No Invitation to Attend the Schroeder League Meeting Thursday Night.

In an account of the Clinton Community center meeting section devoted to municipal politics, over which E H. Schroder presided it was said that Allen P. Cowgill solicitously inquired if any of the present commissioners were present. It was not Mr. Cowgill, but Mr. Schroder, who made this inquiry. Concerning the meeting Mayor Zehrung said Friday:

"As far as I am concerned I did not receive an invitation. I knew nothing of the meeting except what I read in the papers that a meeting of the Bryan municipal league would be held Thursday evening and would be addressed by candidates on the Bryan 'municipal league ticket.' I could hardly expect to receive an invitation to attend any meeting presided over by Mr. Schroder."

TAKE THEIR NAMES OFF IT

Two Members of House Remove Signatures From Resolution About Architect.

Representatives Harrington and Bailey Friday took their names off the resolution drawn up by Representative Amspoker which condemns Architect Goodhue and calls for the termination of his contract to build the new state house.

Mr. Amspoker said that he would probably call the resolution up Saturday, but the suspicion prevails that little more will be heard about it.

The house members of the conference committee on the general appropriation bill, which is to battle with a senate committee over disputed items held a meeting Friday It decided to stand pat on the proposition that the senate 10 per cent cut of salaries, the decrease of the national guard appropriation and the cut in the state normals should not be adopted. It will hold another meeting later in the day.

The house cut the university appropriation and raised that for the state normals, one of which is located in Chairman Mears' howe town of Wayne. The senate cut the normals and raised that of the university.

SHOW RESPECT FOR THE DEAD

HOUSE OPPOSES DISTURBANCE OF ALL GRAVES.

Instead of Digging Them Out in Search of Treasure, Members Would Sprinkle Here and There a Flower.

Treasure seekers who would force the sexton to bring forth the dead from the legislative graveyard, were checkmated at every turn in the house Friday A majority of those who attended the funeral exercises this sort of indelicacy. Rather than commit such outrage, they would sprinkle a flower here and there upon a grave

Representative Reece would have the sexton produce the remains of S. F. 269, sugar bill. The vote was 34 to recall and 42 to let it rest in peace under the moss and the sycamore. Scientists who claim to have discovered a serum or something to bring the dead back to life, have a following in the house. Only the house practitioners cannot boast of success. The sugar bill would provide a special system of tax assessment for the output of western Nebraska sugar factories.

Mr. Bock, democrat, said that those interested in the dead should see Governor Bryan and urge that he call an extraordinary session at some future date to resurrect deserving measures.

An attempt to lift S. F. 12, salary reducing measure, also failed. The governor would not be bothered and would continue to receive $7,500. Supreme court judges, according to the terms of this bill, must take a slice of $1,500 each or a reduction from $7,500 to $6,000. District court judges and elective state officers, except the governor, would be dropped to $4,500. Representative Brown, introducer of the motion to revive, said that the state could save $32,000 a year.

Opponents reminded him that good and efficient judges are not common and that when the people of Nebraska voted on the new constitution, section by section, they knew what they were doing as to salaries.

As a substitute to the Brown motion, Strehlow moved that the sifting committee be dissolved. O'Malley asked that both motions be tabled. He was supported 61 to 24.

INDEMNITY PAID BY STATE

Total of $138,668 Goes to Fifty-two Herd Owners in the Year Ending December 31, 1922.

A sttaement prepared by Deputy Secretary G. L. Shumway for the information of Governor Bryan, taken from records of the department of agriculture, contains the names of fifty-two owners of cattle who received indemnity for tuberculosis cattle from July 1, 1921, to December 31, 1923.

The indemnity paid was $138,668.13. The total salaries, office supplies and other expenses paid as costs of administration was $62,925.73.

There is a wide difference between the pre-shipment appraisal and the market price, which takes more public money and less packers' money to purchase the cattle.

For instance, one cow appraised before shipment at $100, had the market price fixed at $18.56. After deductions for freight, etc., the packers paid $15.29 for the beef, while the state paid $25 and the federal government paid $25. This animal was passed for food.

The Judy herd of sixty-eight head at Kearney brought the owners $85 50 per head from all sources.

The Allen herd of twenty-two head at Lexington was appraised at $496.81 per head.

The Taylor herd of fourteen head at Abbott brought the owners $138.60 per head.

hTe Crews herd of nineteen head at Haigler brought $142.05 per head.

One hundred sixty-seven head in ten herds out of fifty-two, brought $121.45 per head average.

Under the cooperative plan the indemnities paid to the fifty-two owners ranges from $9 $67.45 to $2,493. Judy Bros of Kearney received the latter sum from the state for sixty-eight head condemned. The appraised value of the Judy cattle was $7,747.

NEVER ADVOCATED VIOLENCE

Ruthenberg on Stand at St. Joseph, Mich., Declares He Did Not Urge Sabotage.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., April 27.—Charles E. Ruthenberg, on trial here for alleged violation of the Michigan syndicalist law, declared today that he had never advocated violence to bring about a political and industrial revolution.

"I desire to see changed conditions in this country, but never have I urged sabotage." Ruthenberg stated It was his second day on the witness stand. His cross-examination will probably extend into next week.

No Joke.

"Fully 75 per cent of the people in these United States are devoting all of their time to thinking up new taboos," remarked the man with the cane. "Here in the paper is an item stating that a gentleman in Idaho wishes a law prohibiting the use of hair tonic on Sunday; yesterday I read of a woman who desires a law passed to stop the sale of safety pins—she declares that housewives are depending more and more upon the pins, with the lamentable result that the art of sewing on buttons is fast becoming a thing of the past. And so on."

"Yep," said the man with the flower in his coat lapel. "Yet I must say there is one law sadly needed—just one."

"I see," said the man with the cane. "You, too, have a pet taboo that—"

"Wait a minute," interrupted the man with the flower. "Hear me out and see if you don't agree with me. The law I would like to see passed would make it a criminal offense to perpetrate a practical joke in any manner, shape or form. In my opinion the practical joker is the lowest animal known to biology."

The man with the cane smiled. "I'll wager some one called you up on the phone last night just when you had begun to find the bed nice and warm, and when you stumbled, cold, shivering, to the receiver, the person on the other end said he just wanted to say hello and immediately hung up. It happens."

"That's nothing compared to what happened to me," said the man with the flower. "Like all law-abiding citizens, I do not patronize the bootleggers, but make my own. Yesterday evening I had intended to bottle the batch which had been in preparation for the last two weeks, but when I got home I learned to my dismay that my wife had poured the whole thing into the sink.

"Why? That's what I asked her, all right! She told me that Jimmy Duncan, who works in a garage and is engaged to my daughter Mabel, played a practical joke which almost scared her to death. It appears that the police brought a broken-down patrol wagon to the garage to be fixed, and Jimmy, after making the necessary repairs, decided to give the car a test trip. Accordingly he drove it around a bit and then thought it would be a great joke to drive to our house and show Mabel the new car he was riding in.

"Well, he parked the car in front of the house. My wife saw it and jumped to the conclusion that the prohibition agents were coming to make a raid. She hustled downstairs and poured my beloved home brew into the sink. I don't know what she said when she discovered that Jimmy had fooled her, but I do know that Jimmy is going to get a wonderful talking to on the evils of practical joking the first time I see him."

WILL APPROVE THIS MEASURE

NO VETO CONTEMPLATED FOR KECK-BRYAN BILL.

Ten Bold Democrats Vote Against Giving Governor Power to Remove Any Officer Before Trial.

The Keck-Bryan or Bryan-Keck bill, H. R. 451, will not be voted by the executive. This, at least, is the general supposition. It required a call of the house to put it on the platform Friday ready to be wheeled to the governor. It gives him power and authority to remove any officer after he, the governor, has directed the attorney general to start ouster proceedings. The officer under the governor's suspicion may, therefore, be ousted prior to a hearing. The house concurred in senate amendments 51 and 41.

Ten bold democrats voted with 31 republicans in opposition. Their opposition is not to be the amendment but to the bill. The amendment makes the law applicable only to elected officers. Twenty-two republicans joined 29 democrats in voting for the bill. Opponents contend that it places too much power in the governor. They suspect that some day the state may have a governor who places politics and party above all else. In which case, they say, he may trump up charges in order to oust a republican and fill his shoes with a democrat. This not only would, if the governor be a democrat, cast serious reflections on the honor and integrity of republican office holders.

"Home rule is slowly slipping away," said Staats of Fremont in explaining his negative vote.

Fololwing are the democrats who voted against their governor's wishes;

Bock, Broome, Brown, C. S. Collins, Davis of Fillmore, Keyes, Morgan, O'Gara, Otteman, Quinn.

Republicans who voted with the 29 democrats for the so-called power bill:

Baldrige Egger, Green, Hardin, Hueftle, Keifer, Lamb, Lundy, Nelson, Reece, Smith Thatcher Timme Vance, Whitehead, Wilson of Dawes, Wingett, Wise, Wood, Speaker Mathers.

HAS ANSWER FOR HECKLERS

Premier Bonar Law Is a Dangerous Adversary in Debate.

Bonar Law usually speaks extemporaneously, a very dangerous policy for a man representing the government, for there are hundreds of alert minds ready to pick flaws in his statements. Because of his accurately trained mind, however, they can rarely find any errors or misstatements.

When heckled Mr. Law is ready with a reply, something like this: "The honorable gentleman said in a speech at Manchester on September the first, 1987," and then from this speech he quotes statements diametrically opposed to the heckler's stand.

I said that he spoke extemporaneously, but he does not speak without notes—in his pockets. Should the heckler deny his quotation, or demand further proof, Mr. Law immediately reaches down into his pocket, always the right one, and draws forth the exact paper to verify his quotation. It seems like a kind of jugglery, an uncanny sense of place. There may be a dozen points in his speech which the opposition may dispute, but he knows exactly into which pocket to dive in order to have irrefutable proof of his statement.

The best description of his character is that he is hard headed, levelheaded, unimaginative, thoroly practical, entirely free from frills, and accurately posted on all national affairs. He is never carried away by emotion. His lucid mind is never misled. He believes that British business is of paramount importance to England. He has been described as "icily regular, splendidly dull."—W. H. Crawford in Century Magazine.

PRESENT FLAG TO SPEAKER

House Expresses Appreciation of His Courtesy and Fairness by Making a Gift.

Speaker Mathers will have the honor of taking home with him the great American flag that has draped the wall behind him all during the session as he has sat in the chair of power.

When the house met Friday, Representative Staats made a nice little speech in which he said some nice things about the speaker's courtesy and fairness and moved that as an appreciation of them on the part of the house that it present to him the flag.

This was carried amid general acclaim and hand clapping. The speaker expressed his appreciation in another nice little speech. He said that he was pleased to be shown this consideration and that he felt convinced from his experience that every member, regardless of political differences that arose acted at all times with the interest of the state and nation at heart. They had proved themselves good Nebraskans and good Americans.

The house passed 68 to 10, H. R 621, which creates a commission made up of four farmers, two business men and the state superintendent of education to codify laws, revise the educational system of the state and revise the course of study for the common and high schools.

The house standing committee reported out for indefinite postponement S F. 35, which fixed the guaranty fund assessment for savings bank at just half that for commercial banks.

OTTAWA BANISHES HELPLESS FAMILY

Mrs. Joseph Boyer and her four children, the eldest eleven and the youngest less than a year old, have been ejected from the Caughnawaga Indian reservation in Canada, because the mother had married a white man twenty-five years ago. The woman, an Indian herself, speaks neither English nor French and has been left penniless in Montreal. The ruling from Ottawa has stirred fear and indignation and is thought to be the first of many cases in which the government intends to remove Indians who have married whites.

TWO TRAVELERS ARE FINED

Charge Was Operating Motor Cars Without Carrying Proper License Tags Upon Them.

Jay Heskett, thirty-nine years old, Bob McGinnis, thirty-one years old, Mrs. Jessie McGinnis, thirty-one, and Mrs. Margaret Heskett, twenty-six, were arrested at about noon Wednesday by State Sheriff Carroll and Deputy Sheriff Benton. The two men have been held at the police station since but the women were released to Attorneys Towle and Robinson. Heskett had $560 70 on his person when arrested, according to police, and Mrs. McGinnis had $200

The party was traveling in two Cadillac touring cars and are from Bristow, Okla., according to Mr. Robinson, and the people were on their way to the oil fields near Casper, Wyo. One of the men is alleged to be an expert driller. A telegram received by Mr. Robinson says that the two men purchased the two autos in Bristow a year ago

Both McGinnis and Heskett pleaded guilty in justice court late Friday to charges of opearting a motor vehicle without a proper license and were fined. The fines were paid. The Heskett car is being held on a request from California but the men were released.

SMOKE DROVE FAMILIES OUT

Fire That Started in Basement Menace for a Time.

Smoke caused by a smoldering fire in the basement of their house 1424 G at 3:15 a. m. Friday drove the F. W. Donnelly and R M. Harding families out into the cold. Some kindling in the furnace room caught fire, it is believed, from some oily rags that had been used by Mr. oDnnelly in doing some painting. The entire house was filled with smoke which roused the two sleeping families. Some electric wiring in the basement was damaged. Mr. Donnelly is Assistant Chief of the city fire department.

A Wireless Typewriter.

"Boys interested in radio, airplanes and typewriters—and today there is hardly an American boy who does not desire to experiment in one way or another with one of these outfits—will like to hear about the new teletype, or wireless typewriter, recently perfected by Uncle Sam's naval authorities," writes George H. Dacy in St. Nicholas. "This curious machine, which looks for all the world like an ordinary typewriter, can be used for either receiving or sending messages in the airship in flight or at the ground station. Typewriting away up above the clouds, while the ghostlike hand of radio duplicates the letters on the keyboard at a station many miles away and actually prints the message, is the latest miracle of science

"As a result of this new invention, naval aircraft, henceforward, will have a better means of communication than that offered by either the radio-telegraph or the radiotelephone. It does away with the necessity for sending messages in code, and it eliminates the chances of error. The teletype presents great commercial possibilities. Cross-country airplane passenger service is assured, and a company is now organizing the service from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The teletype will permit of sending messages—reports on the stock market, business conditions, current events, sporting news and the like—to persons traveling in the planes. The typewriter in the airplane will receive and print these messages, while it also can be used in sending dispatches to the different ground stations or depots of the aerial road.

"The sending instrument of the teletype has an alphabetical keyboard operated by hand, like that of the average typewriter. Each key is connected to the radio installation in the plane, and when a letter is struck on the keyboard, a radio impulse is sent out from the antennae of the plane and is received at the ground station. When the letter A is struck on the keyboard in the plane, the radio energy speeds to the receiving instrument on the ground and causes the same letter to print on the recording paper. This process is repeated until the entire message is sent."

FOR FREEDOM OF SPEECH AND PRESS

FLOYD E. THOMPSON.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—"Every citizen has a right to criticize an inefficient or corrupt government without fear of civil as well as criminal prosecution" was the famous ruling of the Illinois state supreme court on the $10,000,000 libel suit, brought against The Chicago Tribune by Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago

Thompson's suit was based on an article in The Chicago Tribune several years ago wherein the newspaper said that Chicago was "broke", its credit shot to pieces, and that it was so improperly and corruptly administerede that its streets were not properly cleaned and the laws not efficiently enforced.

The decision was written by Justice Floyd E. Thompson It sets a precedent for open criticism of loose government.

Let Well Enough Alone.

A movie queen approached the general managed with a momentous question. He was not unprepared for it.

"Don't you think I can make just as good pictures if I marry?"

The big boss deliberated and made measured reply "It's risky girlie."

"Why is it so?"

"Well, you won't get so much help As things stand, the author, the director, the camera operator, the press agent and the property man are in love with you."—Chicago News.

Three Life Boats Found Out of 237 Persons Who Were on Mail Boat Fast on Rocks.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, April 27.—Three life boats with survivors from the ill-fated Portuguese mail steamer Mossamedes have reached Port Alexander safely.

The survivors expressed the belief that the other boats which set out from the Mossamedes after the vessel had grounded off Cape Frio, probably have reached land also.

CAPE TOWN, April 27.—A search that has extended for thirty miles in either direction along the coast from the wreck of the Portuguese mail boat Mossamedes has failed to reveal a trace of survivors. Of the 237 souls on board, who are missing together with the vessel's life boats, 29 are women and 35 children. The coast is wild and without much fresh water. The Mossamedes last was heard from by wireless at ten minutes of six Tuesday morning. She is now fast on the rocks

MAXIMUM RATE BILL PASSES IN SENATE

Osterman Bill Revived and Gets Thru by Bare Majority After Repeated Changes of Votes.

The senate passed H. R. 589 Thursday morning by a bare majority after several senators had changed their votes twice. This bill was once killed in the senate, but later that body asked for its return from the house. Chambers of Omaha was instrumental in getting the bill revived and passed. R B. Howell, United States senator, is credited with being the power behind Chambers that set the wheels in motion.

The bill was introduced by Osterman. It provides that the railway commission in making rates for common carriers and public utilities over which it has control shall make only maximum rates. Promoters of the bill contend that if it becomes a law there will immediately be a great contest between telephone companies and perhaps other common carriers to reduce rates.

The railway commission alleges the bill is of little importance as common carriers have always been allowed to reduce rates whenever they ask permission. If the bill stimulates competition it will be a surprise to many who have watched the progress of the bill

Larkin of Douglas passed when the roll was called on the passage of this measure, but later changed twice, landing in the aye column. Reed and Behrens changed twice, Anderson, Illian, Reifenrath and Tomek once each. The result of the roll call was:

Aye—Bart, Behrens, Chambers, Cooper, Fries, Illian, Johnson, Larkin, Meacham, Osborne, Reifenrath, Rickard, Robbins, Saunders, Shellenbarger, Sturdevant, Thiessen—17.

Nay—Allen, Anderson, Banning, B'[illegible], Good, Gumb, Hastings, Kroh, McGowan, Purcell, Reed, Wiltse, Wilkins, Warner, Tomek—15.

Smrha was reported excused to go to his home. A call of the house was raised when it became known that his presence could not be secured.

UP FROM THE DEATH CELL

The Story of a Man Who Made Good

BY JOHN W. KANE

EX-CONVICT NO. 1666.

(Copyright, 1923, in the United States, Canada, Great Britian and South America, by the North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

CHAPTER III.

The noise from the mob had subsided into a murmur; thru it there came an occasional yell, and sometimes an answer. I knew they were waiting outside to see the vanguard lead me out. The trample of feet along the opposite corridor from where was told me there were half a dozen or more men approaching. I heard them turning the corner of the cell-block. I waited, every nerve drawn tight.

A rattling of levers and lever-box doors from the other end of my corridor and the light inside of my cell was switched on.

The first man of those approaching was standing in front of my cell. The lever was shot back, my door swung open.

I arose.

"Here," said he, throwing what appeared to be a suit of clothes on the cot "Take these and get into them as quick as you can. Leave your coat, vest and hat here—you can get them later."

I hesitated. The man was in plain clothes, and by his side stood a small fellow expectantly watching me. Could these be members of the mob? If so, why were they asking me to change clothes?

"Don't lose any time," the larger man urged. "The chief is palavering with some of them out in the office. He told 'em you had already been taken away. This is your only chance."

I glanced down at the clothes and caught sight of a large bright button. Then quickly came an understanding. I was to don a police uniform.

I slipped out of my own coat and vest.

"You fold these up," the plain-clothes officer instructed that smaller man—a trusty prisoner. "Take them and his hat to the office after we're gone."

I Am Told to Use My Wits.

A moment later I was walking along that corridor in the uniform of a "harness bull." While in front and behind walked several detectives.

"Listen now," one of them addressed me just before we entered the corridor leading to the outer offices. "If you act with good sense and follow along after the man in front of you, we'll pass out right by that crowd without any trouble; but if you get excited and think of making a getaway, that will only attract attention to you, and the gang might get you then in spite of all we can do."

"I'd rather take my chances with the law than with them," I returned. "Which man am I to follow?"

"This man right here." He pointed to the same rough-spoken fellow that had tried to scare me into answering questions. "Just walk along in an unconcerned manner."

I had been handed a regulation patrolman's hat and with the full rig on I was perhaps the very last person the lynchers would suspect as the desired victim. We filed out and down the corridor, passing close by where members of the mob were waiting.

"Step back a bit, you fellows," the man in front of me said to the crowd. "We've got to get out of here on duty."

The crowd began giving way to one side.

"Better stay and see the fun!" one of them called out.

"No, go ahead to your duty some place else," interposed another, looking me squarely in the face; "there'll be enough here to watch the show."

"What are they doin' in there?" inquired a third.

The man next behind me answered: "Your committee is talking it over with the chief—you fellows weren't fast enough. The two men you want were taken away a half hour ago."

"We're Goin' to Get Them!"

The answer came from the street: "They're right in there now!—and we're goin' to get them, too."

By that time we were out on the sidewalk and turning to the right. I glanced back at the mass that reached entirely across the street, but the policeman behind me spoke low and bade me look straight ahead.

A half block from the station entrance we turned a corner, and a moment later walked diagonally across that street, then up an alley for a distance, and there three of the officers and I entered a carriage and were driven swiftly away.

As we drove in silence I was thinking of that mob. At that day I scarcely knew there was such a word as psychology. Now I know there is a mob psychology just the same as there is a psychology of the individual. A mob bent upon killing is devoid of reasoning power. It has an aggregate emotional condition. One mind plays upon another until there is a tension that nothing but blood will relax.

Five years prior to that day I had sat upon a horse on the outskirts of a mounted mob that hanged two cattle thieves to an elm limb in Oklahoma. That, however, was not a noisy mob looking for "the fun" or "the show." But after it was over, those lynchers of the cattle thieves were for the most part sorry. They found that one of the victims had taken no part in the thievery. For my part I was there like the schoolboy who had joined in the plan to help rob an orchard, yet all the time pitied the man who was to be robbed. Be that as it may, five years' time had shifted the scenery in various ways, and there I was, the desired victim.

My Partner Breaks Down.

The voice of one of the officers broke my train of thought.

"You stood it better than your partner did."

"How so?" I questioned.

"He broke down when he found they wanted to lynch him. We had to carry him out thru a basement and tear off a couple o' bars over a window."

"He caused you quite a bit of trouble, then."

"Yes, but trouble's a part of our work, I reckon—isn't it Bill?" He turned to another of my conductors.

"It's nearly all trouble," that one replied. And then, true to the tactics of the police when they want a confession, he went on: "But that other chap's got a big streak of yellow in him. The thing I'm sorry about is, this man is just goin' to fool around and let his partner get in on the safe side—while he will have to take the worst of it. Of course, you know your own business, old man"—I knew he meant me—"but if I were in your place I'd do a little bit of talking myself. Everybody knows you're guilty, but we know, too, there might be circumstances about the matter that, if brought out, would make it a lot easier for you."

I made no answer.

I had begun to wonder where we were going but decided to wait and see. For ten minutes more our carriage wheels creaked over the frozen snow; then we came to a stop. One of the officers got out and talked with someone; a moment later the door was opened and I stepped out in front of a large, well-lighted building that had a high stone wall joining it on the right and the left. We were in front of the state prison.

Inside the front office I came face to face with my partner again. He had arrived a few minutes ahead of us. He would not look at me. The handcuffs that had been placed on my wrists as soon as we were away from the mob were removed and I was told to occupy a certain seat.

The officers on duty there seemed to accept it as a matter of course that we were brought to the penitentiary.

S. K. Put After Name.

"Let's see—your name is Kane?" The man at the desk by which I was sitting addressed me. "What is your first name, please?"

"John W. Kane," I answered, surprised at his manner. I had heard that state prison officials were always gruff.

"And your age, Mr. Kane?" he went on, writing in a ledger as he spoke.

I gave him my age.

"We'll have to take a full description of you tomorrow," he explained, "but I'll enter this much now." And out at the end of that descriptive line I saw him write two letters, "S. K."

"May I ask what the 'S. K.' means?" I questioned.

"Safe keeping," he replied promptly. "And no doubt you'll be safe up here." This smilingly.

"No doubt," I returned.

Then my city police escorts prepared to take their leave.

"We'll see you tomorrow, Kane," one of them turned back to tell me. "In the meantime you think it over carefully—and look to your own interests."

I knew what he meant by that: It was but another way of urging me to come clean, as the chief of detectives had said. I merely nodded to him. The large outer door was swung to and locked.

"Now you boys want to sleep, I suppose," observed the man at the desk, rising, "and we'll go through the formalities of taking you inside. Our duty to make sure you haven't anything contraband on you. Mr. West?" and he nodded toward an officer present.

Mr. West searched us carefully. There was nothing left in my pockets, however, not even a handkerchief—the city police had taken care of that part—and the searching process did not take long.

"This way, boys."

We both rose

"They've Got It in for Me."

"Now just a word," said my partner; "am I to be locked up, too?"

"You certainly are. The desk man frowned at him.

"I'm not even accused of any crime," my partner pleaded, and I knew he was merely making an ass of himself. "If I have to go inside there, those prisoners will have it in for me, and—"

"Why will they have it in for you?" questioned one of the officers.

"Well," returned he, showing in every line of his face the fear that squealers have of convicts in the aggregate, "they might think that I'm a witness against them, and I'm not."

"You will be though," I interposed, "and you'd just as well begin now to take your medicine."

Almost with the words, however, I felt I had blundered. I knew that while those officials were treating me considerately, they were watching my every move and anything incriminating would be duly reported. I had been quite a newspaper reader and remembered well how the papers, in their desire to give the public all the news, were always wont to set forth each little item of news bearing in any manner upon the character of one accused of a crime. I knew that my words to my partner savored indirectly of a threat. Then and there I decided that in the future I would be on my guard against impulsive statements.

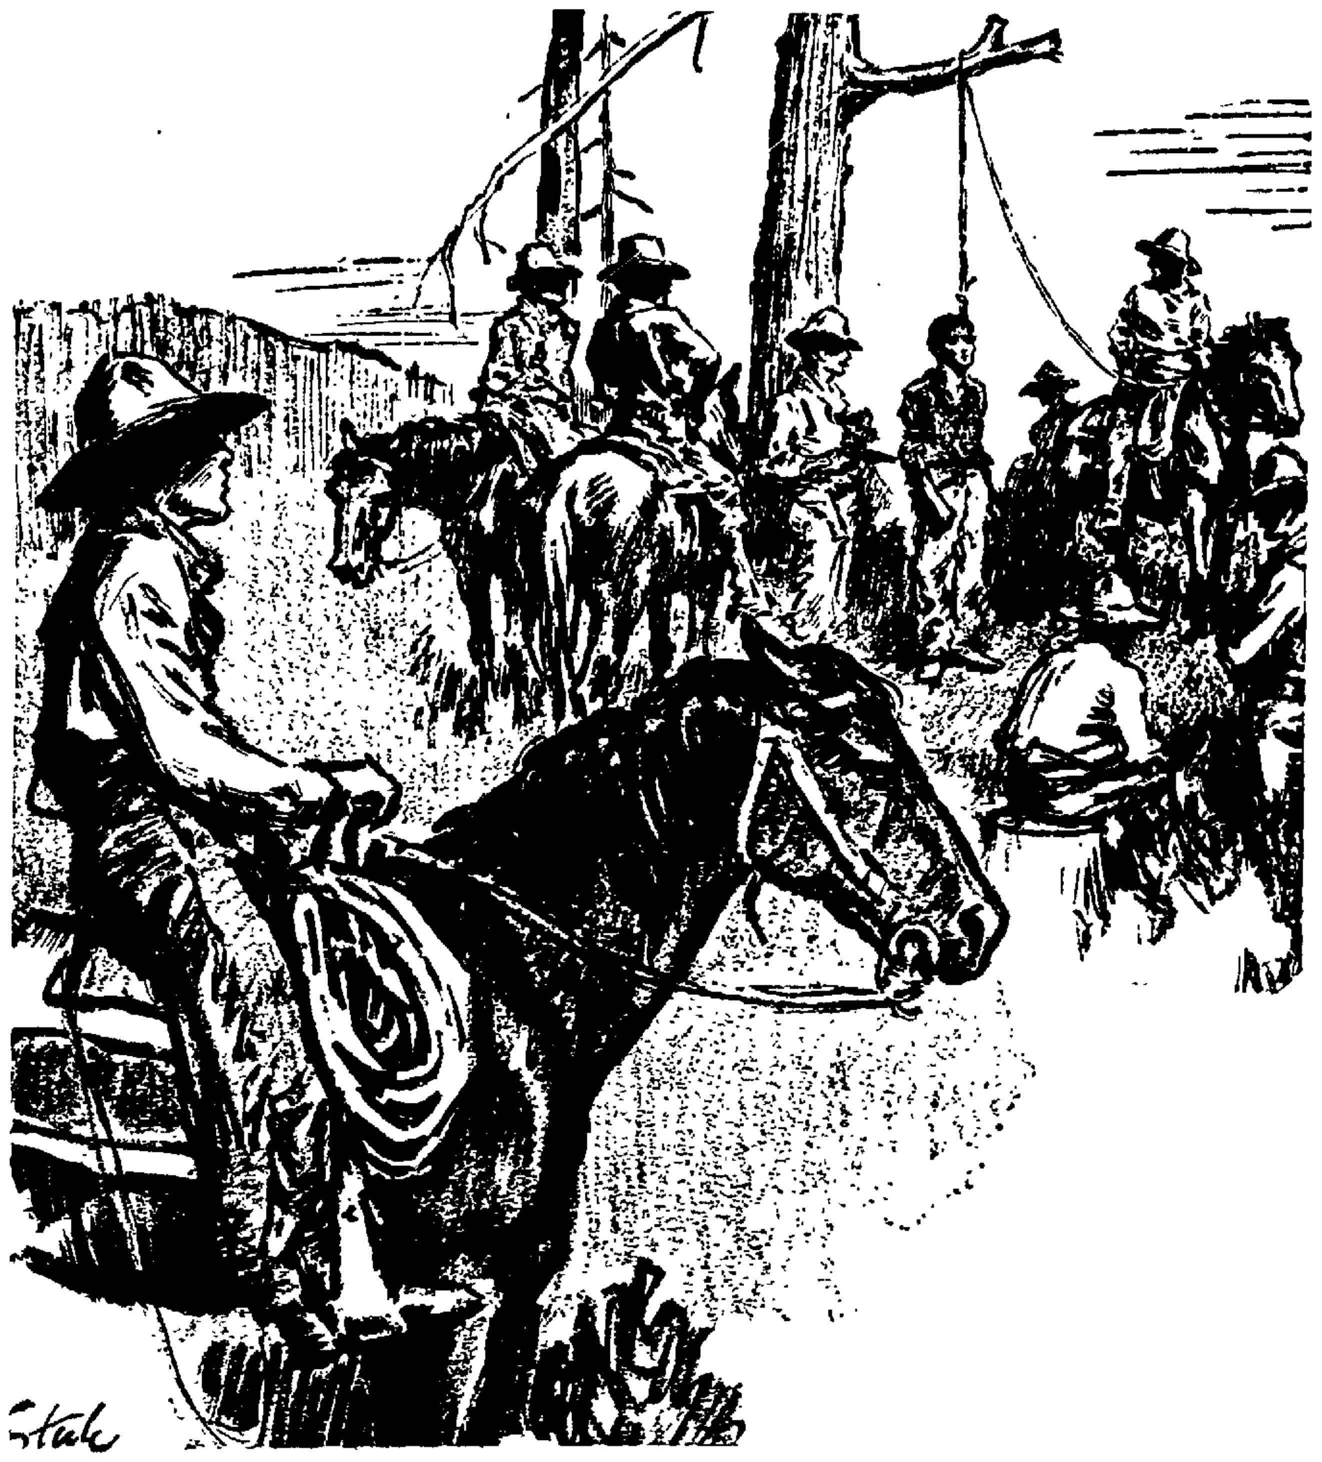
"So far as we are informed," said the man who had made those ledger entries, "neither of you men stands accused officially of any crime. But the record here shows"—he turned, facing my partner—"that you, too, are to be held by the state prison authorities in safe keeping for the city police; and that means actual safety. You'll have to go inside."

That settled it, yet I could see that my partner was undergoing a bit of agony. As we passed inside the prison enclosure, I counted gates and barred doors. And, including the door between the prison offices and the court in front, we were, after being finally locked in separate cells on the same tier, behind six barred and combination-locked steel doors. Truly, all indications were that we were then, so far as any escape was concerned, perfectly safe.

"Say," the cellhouse custodian addressed me through the bars of my narrow steel-walled cell, "you'll have five minutes more in which to undress and get settled on your cot; then I'll switch the lights off."

"All right," I answered. And in five minutes more I was lying, for the first night, in the darkness of a penitentiary cell.

("Charity From A Yegg," Chapter Four of Kane's Life Story, tomorrow.)



"I had sat on a horse on the outskirts of a mob that had hanged two cattle thieves. * * * Five year's time had shifted the scenery and now I was the desired victim."

How Your Taxes May Be Reduced

HE who whacks a tax can count on a hearing from the taxpayers and a reasonable amount of newspaper publicity. The suggestion may start in a Cabinet meeting, in a Treasury Department statement, in a chance phrase of a press interview, but it percolates rapidly. Tho Chairman Smoot, of the Senate Finance Committee, deprecates any move to change the taxes at the next session of Congress, and the New York Times favors giving the present revenue law more time to find itself, many newspapers are inclined to think that the Senator is reckoning without his host. "Oh, there's going to be a merry time when the next Congress meets in December," gleefully exclaims a progressive Kansas paper, and an Ohio Democratic paper foresees "a bitter controversy over tax revision at the next session of Congress."

In THE LITERARY DIGEST this week, April 28th issue, new taxation suggestions that have been advanced are explained, comments on the proposals of various groups in and out of Congress are presented, and the probable effect upon the people of any change in present taxation plans is pointed out. CLASS WAR IS FATAL TO ONE

A NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY FRESHMAN IS THE VICTIM.

Auto Accident Blamed on Freshman-Sophomore Fight Also Injures Six Other Persons, One Seriously.

CHICAGO, April 27.—One Northwestern university freshman was killed and six other persons injured, one seriously, in an automobile wreck which was blamed on a varsity "class war" today.

Louis Aubre, Chicago, was killed. Another freshman, Ralph Williams, Harlan, Ky., is unconscious in an Evanston hospital with a fractured skull and possible internal injuries

An auto containing Aubre, Williams and three other freshmen was reported by police to have been racing on Sheridan Road, in Wilmette, in search of a freshman kidnaped yesterday by sophomores. The machine was wrecked when it collided with a car driven by Mrs. Arthur D. Winslow. Mrs. Winslow and Mrs. I. W. Jordan, returning from a theater party, was also slightly injured.

The freshman car was declared to have been attempting to evade a carload of sophomores who were trying to thwart the search for the kidnaped lower class man.

The class war blamed had been waged at Northwestern for several years and first reached a stage of intense feeling in 1921 when sophomores began to kidnap freshmen and duck them in Lake Michigan.

Leighton Mount, one of the freshmen abducted at that time, was never seen again after he was carried away by the upper classmen.

Kidnapings this year reached a climax yesterday when Dick Howell, freshman and holder of several world swimming records, was seized by sophomores in front of a frat house and whisked away into Wisconsin.

Scores of freshmen auto parties participated in an all night search for him.

An inquest will be held today.

The accident brought auto fatalities in Chicago in twenty-four hours to seven.

Are Women Overworked?

Yes, hundreds of thousands of them are This applies to the housewife and mother who struggles on a small income to make both ends meet by doing all the washing, ironing, cooking, making and mending for a large family. There are others who not only support themselves working in factories, shops, stores and offices, but often have an invalid father or mother to support, therefore do housework beside. These are the women who break down early and are afflicted with various forms of female weakness. Ninety-eight out of every 100 women who have tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have proved that it is a successful remedy for woman's ills. For nearly fifty years it has been restoring women to health, and it will pay every ailing woman to try it.—Advertisement.

You Can Win Slender Shoulders To Accent Your Bodily Symmetry

By LUCREZIA BORI

The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

EVERY movement of a supple, beautifully moulded body makes a lovely picture. The woman who has such a wonderful possession is most often totally unconscious of her movements. She doubtless knows that her lines may well be envied by some one less fortunate, but she is secure in the knowledge of their beauty, and can forget all about them.

It is in part this blissful unconsciousness that goes into making her movements free and unhampered and full of beauty. In her posture and the way she carries her body when she walks you may full well realize the "poetry of motion," of which you have so often heard.

Now, for this result to be possible you must have well-moulded, symmetrical lines. Every part of your body must be in true proportion.

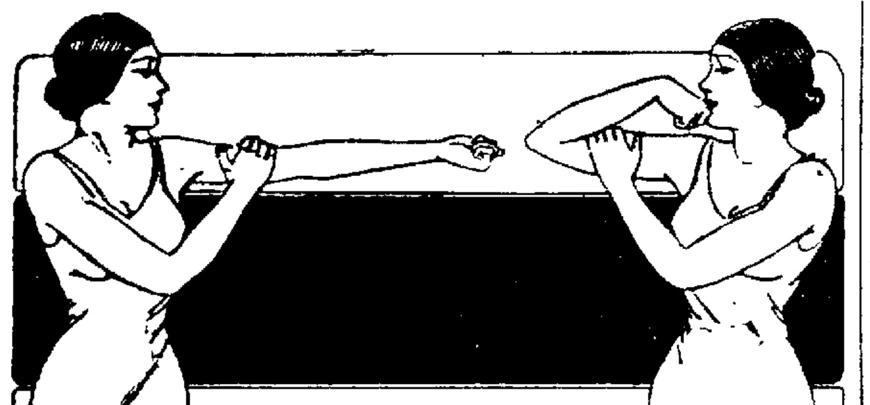
You know how fatal to real beauty it is for the arms, the legs, the shoulders or any particular part of your body to spoil the beauty of the symmetrical beauty, it will be before you as a constant fly in the ointment until you would be willing to undergo any difficult measure to do away with it.

Now, the point I want to make is that it isn't difficult measures that you'll have to adopt that count so much as persistence and patience. Reducing exercises aren't so difficult. It takes only a few minutes to do them, but the difficulty that women seem to encounter is in possessing the tenacity it takes to do them every day.

I think one of the best ways to keep up your enthusiasm until the goal is reached is to keep constantly before your mind's eye a picture of yourself as you will appear when the necessary reducing is over and done with.

The exercise I'm going to give you here is a very simple one for imparting slim, firm lines to your arms and removing superfluous flesh from near your shoulders.

Think how much more effectively you can shrug your shoulders when you have trim, shapely ones to shrug!



Study the Details of This Simple Exercise—Then Read How to Do It.

whole. For instance, the beauty of a slender, supple waist is entirely lost if the shoulders are thick and ungainly.

You may have an ankle that anyone would be proud to own, you may have a slim waist and a well-moulded wrist. But thick shoulders and arms, whose heaviness add to your breadth, can overshadow the points of which you could be justly proud.

If you are not unmindful of the blemish which spoils your chance for greater

The exercise is simply to stand, grasp the bicep muscle of your upper arm firmly with your hand and bend your arm from the elbow several times.

Start with your arm straight out, then with a clean-cut decisive movement bring your closed fist up to your shoulder. Repeat this about six times with each arm. Keep it up every day, and you will add tone to your muscles and gain beauty by losing superfluous flesh.

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

The Decision Madge Swiftly Made to Meet Dicky's Ultimatum.

DICKY'S sneering reference to me as "Joan-of-Arc-with-the-fagots-just-lighting," was the last match needed to set the powder magazine of my temper ablaze.

One of my husband's most effective ways of infuriating me is to refer to me as "martyr-like"—I sometimes wonder if my wrathful reaction to the accusation is not because of my subconscious recognition of a soupcon of truth in it—and the words in which he had couched his ultimatum concerning our finding another place had been especially blistering.

The one advantage I have in any tilt with Dicky has its roots in the essential difference of our temperaments. When he is angry he unconsciously works himself into a rage which becomes more tempestuous as it advances. But as a general thing, the more angry I am, the more quiet becomes my voice, and the more controlled becomes my demeanor. Before I let myself go, I am like a seething volcano, but the mere act of loosening the reins on my wrath changes me to an iceberg, with a frigidity of voice and mien which generally stands me in good stead in any controversy.

"I—Will—Not!"

So, with every nerve taut but controlled, I threw back my head and faced my irate husband steadily.

"You mean then, I infer, to break our budget agreement to pay only so much for rent because we wish to save for Junior?" I put the query icily.

"I mean to get out of this blasted hole, no matter what I pay or what happens," Dicky stormed.

"Very well, then," I acquiesced. "You are at perfect liberty to select as expensive an apartment as you please—but—it will be a bachelor one. I will not live in any apartment for which we pay more than the rent we so solemnly agreed upon when we arranged our budget——"

Dicky promptly consigned the budget to a place which would inevitably consume its leaves, but I went on unheeding.

"Neither will I again undergo the back-breaking, nerve-shattering drudgery which preceded my finding of this place," I said steadily. "You hunted spectacularly for a day or two, and then tossed the whole thing upon my shoulders, and off your own mind. You know nothing whatever of housing conditions nor of the infinite trouble I had before fortunately stumbling upon this apartment. If you can find another at the same price in which you will consent to live, I'll gladly share it, or I will stay here with you. But look farther for an apartment, myself, or live in one more expensive than this, are things I—will—not—do."

Dicky Settles One Question.

I purposely made each word emphatic, and stressed the pauses between them. Then I turned away, as if Dicky's reaction to my ultimatum was a matter of no interest to me.

In reality, however, my nerves were tensely fused into one burning interrogation point. I did not have to wait long for an answer, however. With a muttered imprecation, Dicky hurried through the frosted-glass doors which separated the living-room from the only bedroom and closed them so vehemently behind him that I feared the glass would be shivered.

It was a satisfactory punctuation of the controversy, I acknowledged to myself philosophically, although I well knew that it was by no means ended. But, with nerves somewhat eased of their tension, I let down the big davenport, which was a really good-looking couch by day, and a comfortable bed at night, and adjusted my coverlets and pillows.

The couch had been one of the things which decided me upon the apartment—this chance for Dicky and me to have the separate rooms that have been ours since our marriage, and because of his propensity for throwing his things upon the bed or floor, whichever happened to be handiest, I had given him the bedroom, and taken the living-room with its disguised davenport as my own sleeping chamber. My comb and brush and other toilet articles I kept in a drawer of the writing desk, but my bath-robe, kimono and night dresses were hung up in the big wardrobe which served as our only closet in Dicky's room.

I was just wondering how I was to get them, when the glass door opened a crack, and through it hurtled a bundle, which falling apart as it struck the floor, sent all my night and early morning requirements—including my mules, my oxfords and a morning house-gown—sprawling in a dozen directions. Dicky had forgotten nothing, and my anger against him was distinctly mitigated with amusement as I surveyed the heterogeneous collection upon the floor of the living-room. But that there was no diminution of Dicky's anger, I realized as I heard the door close again with an angry click.

YOUR HEALTH

Here's a "Follow-Up" on Physical House-Cleaning

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

DR. COPELAND

YESTERDAY I talked to you about the importance of regular house-cleanings for your body. Just as the housewife goes over her house twice a year, cleaning out all the dirt, sifting out the worthless trash and leaving the dwelling place spic and span, so you should go over your body at regular intervals.

I spoke about the teeth and the importance of early discovery of any obvious or hidden defects.

Because it fits in here, I wish to skip the other organs for the moment to speak of the intestinal tract. The lower bowel is called the large intestine, or the colon. Four or five feet of this twisted and convoluted tube makes up a part of the body which is too much neglected by the average person.

Sometimes the colon loses its normal structure and becomes an infected, pus-oozing membrane, capable of poisoning the whole system.

The interesting thing about such conditions of the colon, as well as serious pus involvement of the roots of the teeth, is that both may be absolutely painless troubles. On this account these important ailments may go on for years without the knowledge of the victim.

I have no desire to alarm you and to make you unduly sensitive to the possibility of having some hidden trouble. My purpose is to point out the necessity of regular inspections, to make certain no disability exists.

All need for worry would disappear if you had this annual or semi-annual overhauling to determine exactly the state of your health. Nature is kind and rarely gives you a serious disturbance without months of warning. Let your doctor do the worrying—place yourself in his hands on occasions and hold him to account for your well-being.

Bad teeth or a bad colon may cause mental disturbance, even insanity, Bright's disease, heart disease and an endless number of minor ailments.

The tonsils must be in good condition, the stomach in first-class working-order and the kidneys in full function, or trouble will occur.

On these occasions of house-cleaning, the urine will be examined to make sure that elimination is perfect and that no failure of kidney action is overlooked. Bad eating or drinking habits may have their effects on these organs, and if the urinary test gives evidence of wrong table habits, your doctor will advise you.

In this connection I wish to comment on the all-too-common ignorance regarding food values, the balanced ration and incompatibilities in food mixtures. You should get at least elementary knowledge about foods. There are many interesting little books on the subject and no one need be ignorant on one of the most important things in life—how to eat.

The heart should be examined and the blood-vessels given proper attention. Your manner of exercising may be faulty. You may be working too hard or not hard enough.

On these occasions of physical examination you will be lectured by your doctor about ventilation, drinking lots of water, sleeping eight hours or more and having some form of agreeable recreation.

Have a house-cleaning now and then and add years to your life as a result.

Answers to Health Questions

MRS. Y. D. Q—Every time my little boy, 1½ years old, nurses, his eyes water and become very red. What would you advise me to do?

A—The baby is too old to be nursed. You should wean him as soon as possible. Bathe the child's eyes with a solution of boracic acid. For further particulars restate your question and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

F. M. Q—Will you please tell me of some exercises whereby I can train my memory?

A—Take a book or paper and read a chapter. Then try and remember the substance of what you have read. Repeat this several times. Do this daily. Also try to associate ideas with certain actions. This will help you.

MRS. S. L. S. Q—Do you believe that fallen arches will cause one to suffer from rheumatism, if so will arch supports cure an advanced case?

A—No, fallen arches would not cause rheumatism, but they may cause pain similar to a rheumatic pain. Arch supports are very helpful in cases of fallen arches, but they should be prescribed by an orthopedist so they will be properly fitted.

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of 20, and have been keeping company with a young man about my own age. We have had an understanding, but have not announced our engagement to our friends as yet.

He is of a very jealous disposition, but is trying hard to overcome it.

A few days ago I received a letter from an old friend of mine. My girl chum, knowing of it, told it to him for fun. He got very angry and demanded to see the letter. I refused, and he said if I didn't show him the letter he would take it away from me. I then got angry and sent him home.

Do you think I did right? Should I have showed him the letter? He hasn't called me up. Should I call him on the 'phone and ask him over?

I am not angry now. I have been so undecided that I thought I would ask your advice.

UNDECIDED.

UNDECIDED: It was not right for the young man to ask to see the letter, my dear, but I am afraid you were rude in the way you acted. Call him up and invite him to call to see you again.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a married woman 18 years of age. I have been married for almost a year. My husband and I are very fond of each other but my mother-in-law and my sister-in-law are always telling tales about me that are not true.

For a while I did not mind it but it is getting worse all the time.

Please advise me what to do for when I tell my husband he says: "Please don't bother me with that gossip all the time." As they are his mother and sister he doesn't want to do a thing about it. But it must be stopped.

MRS. M. M.

MRS. M. M.: If you are happy with your husband why do you pay any attention to anyone else, my dear?

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl of 20, and am in love with a young man of 25. I have been going with him about a year, and am about to marry him. I love him and he tells me he loves me.

His folks are jealous of me, and do not want him to see me. But he sees me just the same, and causes trouble in his home.

I am out of town at present, and can't see him as much as when I am at home. Can you tell me whether his folks are going to come between us? I would like your advice as to marrying him.

K. B. R.

K. B. R.: If the young man loves you he will marry you. This is a question, of course, for him to decide. But you will both be happier, I am sure, if before marrying him you do all in your power to win the love and confidence of his family, and then try with all your might to hold that love and confidence throughout the years of your married life. All success to you, dear.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a woman of 22, and I am deeply in love with a young man of 21. He also loves me.

Last night he asked me to marry him, and I said that I must have a day or two to think it over. He asked me why I must, for we have been sweethearts since childhood, and I told him on account of our age I did not know whether I could marry him. He said he did not think it made any difference. I don't either, but I thought I would ask you whether it is right to marry this young man if we love each other, dear?

PATIENCE.

PATIENCE: There is no reason why you shouldn't marry this young man and be very happy, my dear.

The Latest Underwear Is a "2-Piece Step-In" That's Really All in One

By ANNETTE BRADSHAW

WOMEN indulge as many whims in their choice of underwear as they do in outer clothing. Then, of course, underclothes fashions change with the changing seasons.

A few seasons ago the one-piece combination was practically universal. Then came the two-piece step-ins, which are still very popular.

But now there is another new development. This gives the same appearance as the two-piece step-ins, but it is really all in one piece.

At the left is a charming combination in white batiste. Fine white net, edged in pale blue wash-ribbon, forms the trimming.

The other suit is of pink crepe de chine. The body is plain, while the drawers are finely pleated. Both are edged in narrow lace. Wash ribbon, again, forms the shoulder-straps.

WINIFRED BLACK Writes About The Glory of Loyalty

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

THE man of affairs was busy. Very busy, indeed. He didn't have time to see the committee from the City Hall. He didn't have a minute to talk things over with the outside manager of his own business from another district.

He didn't want to bother with the manager of his ranch—the ranch that is the comfort of his busy days. He had his income tax to make out, and his attorney to see and letters to write, and he hadn't an instant to give to any one on earth. And then the telephone rang and the man of affairs frowned—listened impatiently at first—it was the stenographer's business to stand between him and interruptions; why did she allow him to be bothered? And then his face cleared and his sharp eyes softened and his voice was like the voice of a different human being.

"Yes, yes," he said. "Thank you for telling me; I'm glad to know."

And then he rang up his favorite florist and ordered a basket of spring flowers to be sent to a modest little hotel in a quiet part of the city.

And those who heard the name of the woman to whom the flowers were to be sent felt a sudden stirring of the heartstrings.

He Sent Spring Flowers

For the woman is a widow—no longer young and never particularly interesting.

But it was her husband who gave the man of affairs his first start in life, years ago, and every once in a while, when she comes to the city from her quiet home in a near-by suburb, she sees the man of affairs and talks with him about old times.

This time she knew that he was very busy and she did not call him up, but some one saw her on the street slipping by in her unobtrusive dress and quiet way, and that nice person made it a point to telephone the man of affairs and tell him that his old friend, the widow, was in town.

And he sent her the spring flowers and a little note and some tickets for the theatre—and she went home from her little visit with her heart warm because one who knew the man who had been all the world to her—remembered.

People are a good deal afraid of the man of affairs. He has the reputation of a fighter and a bad man in a quarrel.

He doesn't forget an injury, they say, and he is always quick to take advantage of the least weakness of his opponent.

Almost a Divine Radiance

Shrewd, worldly, brilliant, successful—so I have always known this man of affairs.

I'm glad I sat in his office and heard his voice soften when he listened to the message over the telephone. I'm glad I heard him order that basket of spring flowers for the widow of the man who befriended him when he was young and ambitious and without place or power.

The next time I see his picture in the papers I shall shut my eyes and think of him, not as he looks in his photographs, not as they see him in the world of business—but as he looked that morning when he spoke the name of his old friend and sent the flowers to his old friend's rather uninteresting little widow.

Fidelity, gratitude, loyalty—what difference does it make, the name you call it? What a quality it is, and how it touches these meagre, selfish lives of ours with something almost like a divine radiance.

Three-Minute Journeys

By Temple Manning

WHERE AUTOCRATIC DECREES ARE STILL ANNOUNCED BY TRUMPET.

IN Central Asia, wedged in between Asiatic Russia on the north and Afghanistan on the south, is the very old khanate of Bokhara.

Bokhara is also the name of the capital of this interesting state. Although now under Russian influence, it still has its hereditary ruler.

Here is found all the mystery and tradition of the Orient. Being on the direct line between Europe and eastern Asia, it is the stopping place for huge caravans, and is the general clearing-house for merchandise between the west and the far east.

Bokhara has always been known as "Bokhara, the Noble," for it has been for centuries the centre of learning and culture of this part of the world.

There is hardly a street—and what dirty, narrow ones they are—which doesn't boast of a school or college.

The citizens of Bokhara will boastfully tell you of their three hundred and fifty-six institutions of learning. But, I am told, an actual count brings it down to an even eighty. Many of the schools are Mohammedan theological seminaries. The most elaborate was built in 1572, by Abdulla. And, of course, the sky-line is broken frequently by the minarets and the domes of the many mosques.

The streets are humming with activity—all sorts of trades being represented in the various bazaars which line the sidewalks. In Bokhara you can buy anything from grain, livestock and firearms to the finest silks, shawls and exquisitely-wrought jewelry.

The whole atmosphere of Bokhara is old—centuries old. Life is much the same as it was a thousand years ago.

The only sign of modernism is the Russian Trans-Caspian Railway, by which one can now reach Bokhara.

But the laborious puffing of the locomotive truly sounds out of place in this eastern capital.

THE HOME KITCHEN

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON

The Authority on Home Cooking

How to Prepare a Delightful Dinner from Canned Goods.

THE day has come when the housewife must seriously consider the canners' art. Large canneries have brought science to their aid to make their products sanitary. Only selected products are used. The result is shown in the excellence of the wares.

Many former prejudices have been overcome through demonstrations at fairs and shows and in large shops. For those who learn to use these canned products properly they are acceptable on any table.

One warning holds good always, and that is—remove the food from the can as soon as the can is opened. This avoids any unpleasant condition, due, perhaps, to contact with the open air.

An emergency dinner may rest on the shelf until it is needed, may be prepared quickly and served attractively, and will pass muster as an unusually good dinner by the most particular guest.

A few hints on how to serve canned goods will be given in the recipes that follow:

Menu.

Oxtail soup
Finnan haddie with drawn butter, potato chips
Tongue and spinach, baked beans, creamed chicken
Peas, mint jelly
Prune and pineapple salad
Crackers, cheese
Plum pudding with hard sauce. Coffee
Nuts, raisins, bonbons

It does not seem possible that all this may be gotten out of cans, but it is true, nevertheless. When a large can of oxtail soup is opened it is a good idea to add to it a small can of tomatoes. Season, heat, and if it seems a little thin add a small cup of freshly-boiled rice, and allow it to stew with the soup as it heats. Add a teaspoonful of sugar with the seasoning, which will take up any flavor that may suggest the can. Serve this soup hot.

Finnan haddie comes in low, untopped glass jars. Remove it from the jar and place it in a fine steamer to heat. Then serve it on a hot platter with a good drawn butter sauce. Garnish the fish with quartered, boiled eggs and a little chopped red pepper—the kind that comes canned in oil. Heat the chips a moment in the oven before serving.

The tongue comes in glass with a tinned top. Remove it from the jar and heat it in a fine steamer. Open a can of spinach, drain it, and if it looks dark run cold water through it. When drained pan it in butter, season, and serve with the tongue, garnished with egg slices. Take a tin of chicken breasts and cut the meat in small pieces. Make a good cream sauce and put the chicken in it [illegible] a few washed capers may be added [illegible] a few strips of red pepper and the juice of an onion.

Take the beans from the can and turn them into a buttered baking-dish, add seasoning, including a little sugar, put a few strips of bacon on top and brown them in the oven. This treatment makes the beans taste as though they were home-baked.

Open a can of peas and let cold water flow over them gently. Drain them carefully until the water is very clear and without bubbles. Place the peas on the fire and let them boil up once. Then drain them and season with pepper, salt, a large lump of butter and a tablespoonful of sugar. This treatment makes the peas as if fresh from the garden. Mint jelly comes, of course, in small tumblers.

Select the large prunes that come in the glass-topped boxes, as they are soft and fresh. Make a slit at the sides and remove the stones. Drain off the juice from a can of grated pineapple. Then add the juice of a lemon and six or seven preserved marrons chopped. Stuff the prunes with the mixture, allowing three to a portion. Place them on lettuce leaves and put a little mayonnaise over them. Almost any kind of cheese comes tinned, bottled or boxed, and it may be chosen to suit the taste of the user. Whole-wheat wafer crackers are excellent with cheese.

The canned plum pudding must be placed in boiling water and kept at the boiling point for one hour, when the contents will be heated through. A good hard sauce or a fruit sauce will be found good with the pudding.

Nuts, raisins and bonbons are all bottled or boxed. Coffee comes in various forms, and may be chosen to taste.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SATURDAY, APRIL 28.

A lively day may be expected from this day's sidereal operations. The vigorous and inspiring Mars, in trine with Luna, may be expected to stimulate to enterprise and initiative out of the usual. And while the energies and faculties may be stirred to bold projects, yet these should be essayed with caution, since the financial influences may be weak, and another aspect may threaten new ventures. In social, domestic and affectional matters the planets are found to be positioned to bring harmony.

Those whose birthday it is have the augury of a lively and active year, with the disposition bold and adventurous, yet the chances should not be jeopardized by too aggressive and unrestrained activities. New projects should be embraced with precaution. A child born on this day may be enterprising and energetic [illegible] but may be subject to losses in this direction unless given early training in caution.

Good Night Stories

DAVID MEETS A QUEER LITTLE ANIMAL.

"WELL, of all things!" David exclaimed, as he stopped up and glanced at the funny-looking creature behind the bars. "What in the world are you, you——"

"Look like a hog," interrupted the animal good-naturedly. "You might as well go on and say it, for I've heard it a million times since I came here. But I'm not a hog in any sense of the word."

"No, I knew that," replied David. "Who ever saw a hog with a trunk like that!"

"More like an elephant, I should say," laughed the animal. "Well, we tapirs all carry trunks like this. We use them to put our food into our mouths just as you use your hand." And Mr. Tapir brushed his brownish-black sides against a stump. "I'll admit our hides are just about as thick as a hog's. Would you believe it, my skin is so thick a bullet bounces right off it?"

"My goodness!" exclaimed David. "I'll bet you're glad of that. Of course, here in the zoo, no one bothers you, but I guess you had plenty of enemies in your wild state. By the way, where did you come from, anyway?"

"From South America," replied Mr. Tapir proudly. "But when it comes to enemies, I have such a keen sense of smell that they never get very close to me. I bet there's no hog on earth that can swim as well as I can either.

"I'll never forget one time a jaguar jumped out of a tree at me. By the way, the jaguar is my worst enemy—and if I hadn't been a good swimmer, I wouldn't have been here talking today. For he almost caught me, but I dived into the river and scooted across to the bushes on the other side so fast he lost sight of me, and I got away."

"Well, of All Things!"

"Hadn't you any way of defending yourself if he caught you?" asked David.

"The only thing I could have done," replied Mr. Tapir, "was to run into the bushes and try to scrape him off my back. But goodness! A fellow takes such a chance that way. It isn't worth it. I'd dive first. It's much safer and I feel perfectly at home in the water. I love it."

"Well, Mr. Tapir, I'm glad to have met you," said David, putting out his hand. "And I hope next year we'll come back here to the zoo, and just as surely as I do, I'll come to see you."

Laughing merrily, David ran off to join his mother and tell her of the pleasant talk he had just had with Mr. Tapir.

TWELVE DIE IN A BLAZE

NEW YORK TENEMENT HOUSE SCENE OF FATALITIES.

Many Overcome While Running Thru Hallways Toward Fire Escapes—Building Is Saved From Destruction.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Twelve persons, [illegible] children, four women and [illegible] perished in flames which swept a crowded five-story Harlem tenement house just before dawn today.

Families asleep in their beds were trapped when the only stairway was destroyed by the sweeping fire which [illegible] dangerous smoke thru the fourth and fifth floor, stifling victims as they groped blindly for safety. [illegible] bodies of the child victims [illegible] found huddled together in [illegible] hallways where, hand in hand, they had sought to make their way out only to be overcome.

[illegible] and mothers, some alive [illegible] unconscious, were found clutching the little bodies. They had dropped unconscious from the smoke and lay there, easy prey for the flames.

Some were found by firemen who penetrated the deadly smoke and were carried down by aerial ladders.

Heavy smoke filled the corridors in the place and many, arising hastily from their beds, ran toward fire escapes, only to be overcome and drop unconscious within sight of safety.

This was responsible for the heavy casualties according to the police, since the fire was not of great proportions.

Early morning passersby saw smoke issuing from some of the windows of the house at 109th street and Madison avenue, and turned in the first alarm shortly before 4 a. m.

The blaze did not burst forth from the structure and seemed stifled in one portion of the building. Heavy gases filled the building thru all the five stories, and those above who attempted to dash down the stairs to safety were unable to penetrate the smoke and were overcome.

Firemen entering the place found bodies of unconscious persons lying in the hallways. Many others were overcome before they could leave their rooms.

Eleven persons were taken to hospitals suffering injuries.

[illegible] who were able to get to the fire escapes ran down to the second floor. A taxicab was driven onto the sidewalk and they stepped to its roof and thence to the street.

Firemen saved many women from where they lay unconscious on the floors and revived them in the open air.

Most of the dead were women and children. A few were badly burned and police were unable to establish positive identification.

Mrs. Anna Soloman, a cripple who could not walk, lay paralyzed in her bed for fifteen minutes while the smoke filled her room and the red glare flickered thru the transom. Firemen found her there and carried her out safely, tho they both suffered burns.

Suspicions of police were aroused at the speed with which the blaze traveled. A squad is minutely examining the building to determine possibilities of incendiarism.

DIVORCE CHEAP IN RUSSIA

American Can Secure One There for 20 Cents, in Two Months' Time.

MOSCOW, April 27.—An American can get a divorce in Russia for 20 cents.

The amount is spent for stamps and publication costs. The divorce takes about two months.

All any foreigner does under the soviet system is to file an application with the civil court, which publishes the decree in official papers. If the foreigner wants to notify his wife—or she her husband—it can be done, but it isn't necessary.

If no reply is received in two months the divorce is granted.

If both the man and woman want to get a divorce, it can be accomplished in less than half an hour in any ordinary marriage bureau. The wife must support herself after any divorce, unless there are children.

There has not yet been a single case of a court refusing to grant a divorce.

The system doesn't seem to have corrupted the general morals of the people. Only two men are known to have taken advantage of the easy divorce law to practice multi-matrimony.

Against [illegible],644 marriages during the second half of 1922 there were 673 divorces. Of these about 40 per cent is attributed to former church marriages.

Many of the communists, however, prefer a marriage without any ceremony at all and officials of the marriage bureau say statistics prove these are often more binding than legal marriage.

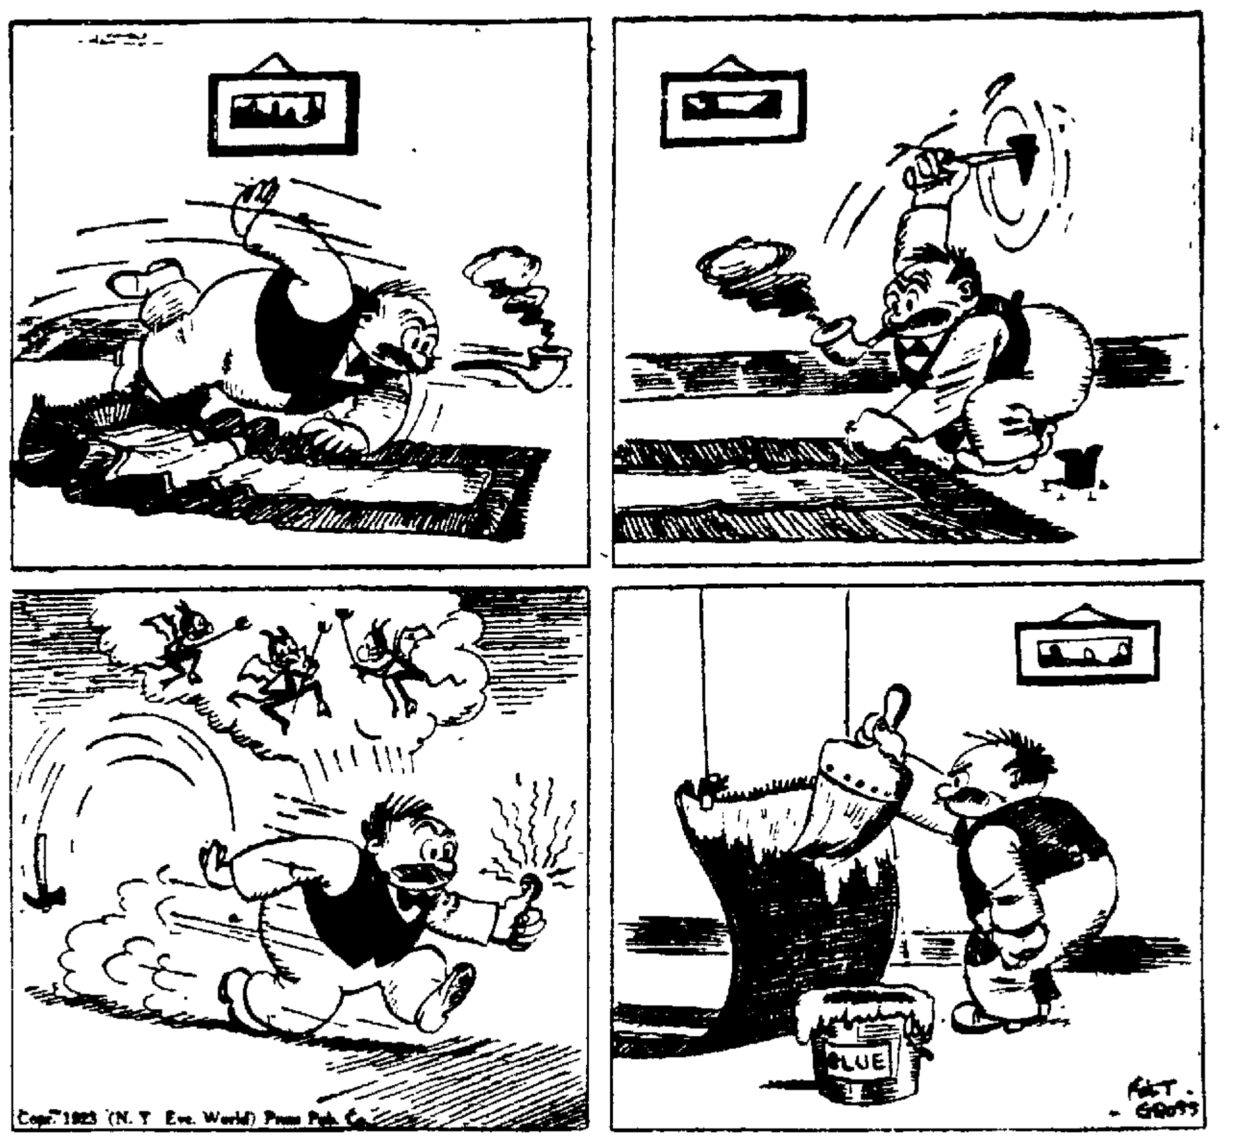
HITZ AND MRS.



BLUE
Copr. 1923 (N. Y. Eve. World) Press Pub. Co.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Cochran returned from their wedding tour in the east.

The renowned Rattlesnake Pete, otherwise Bill Liddiard, came to Lincoln from Rushville to see about raising a company of half breed scouts to act in conjunction with Buffalo Bill Cody's troops. He was the man in charge of the congress of Indians at the trans-Mississippi exposition.

Nebraska claimed the credit of being the first state in the union to offer its national guard to be mustered into United States service.

Lincoln was filled all day long with marching columns of soldiers on their way to Camp Alvin Saunders at the fair grounds. Before taps were called nineteen companies had been assigned places in camp.

The new dramatic club "Thalia" under the supervision of the German journalist, Francois Martin, was arranging for a great patriotic demonstration of the German-Americans of Lincoln.

Prospects were for a big naval battle in far eastern waters. The Spaniards were ready to meet Dewey.

Class of America's Track Athletes Gathering at Drake and Penn Relays Now

Strayer-Schwabel Bout Should Settle Much Mooted Question

1,300 ATHLETES IN THE DRAKE CLASSIC

Preliminary Heats of Several Events Will Be Run Friday With Finals Coming Saturday—Joie Ray Will Run.

DES MOINES, Ia., April 27.—With more than 1,300 athletes entered from all corners of the nation, the Drake relays opened here this afternoon. John L. Griffith, czar of the big ten athletics, who established the Drake university classic in 1909, will pull the starting gun at 2 o'clock.

Eighteen events are scheduled on this afternoon's program, beginning with the 100-yard dash preliminaries for universities and colleges. Seven other preliminaries in university events will be held. The remainder of ther aces will be finals between Iowa conference colleges and class A and B high school teams.

Joie Ray, Illinois Athletic club, will run exhibition laps during the program today.

Saturday will be the big day of the relays, with the best university and college teams in the country fighting for honors.

Twenty-two universities and thirty-nine colleges, besides ninety high schools and grade schools, are entered in relays.

Penn Relays Draw From All Sections

PHILADELPHIA, April 27.—Three thousand athletes from more than five hundred schools and colleges assumed the role of the traditional robin and officially the spring season when they gathered here today for the twenty-ninth annual Pennsylvania relay carnival. From clear skies the sun broke out this morning and promised almost ideal conditions for thirty-two events on the opening day schedule.

The Penn relays always have some kind of feature, and the color is added this year by the presence of the Oxford university team from England, which is to compete in the spring medley relay and the two-mile international championship.

Stevenson Will Run Quarter.

Bill Stevenson, former Princeton star and one time national quarter-mile champion, is one of the headliners of the English team. He is to run the quarter in the medley relay.

Practically every big college in the east is represented, and the middle western delegates are led by the University of Kansas with a quarter-mile team that is going out after the world's record. In a trial last week the Kansans came within one-fifth of a second of the record.

Always fast, the track in the new Pennsylvania stadium is said to be even better than it was in the past, and with favorable conditions flocks of new records are expected to be chalked up.

Field event records may also fall, especially that for the hammer throw. Tootell, the big Bowdoin giant, in a trial yesterday, came within eight and a half feet of Pat Ryan's world record, and he said he was only working out.

Sectional Events On Card.

Most of the events today are for sectional championships among high school and prep school teams, but there are enough star events late in the afternoon to balance the program. The program will start at 2 o'clock and will run until 5:30.

Captain Milligan, Stevenson, Renwick and Miller will wear the British colors in the feature medley relay and will be opposed by teams from Penn State, Harvard, Princeton, Georgetown, Pittsburgh and Ohio state. Lawson Robertson, Pennsylvania coach, said today that the winning team was almost sure to break the world's record, as there is so much class represented.

Morgan, a hill and dale runner, will run for Oxford in the two-mile championship and will be opposed by Higgins of Columbia, Thompson of Hamilton institute, Booth of Johns Hopkins, Dykman of Pittsburgh, Douglas of Yale, Bonsall of Cornell, Helme of Georgetown Kuykendall of Kansas and McLane of Pennsylvania.

Nothing But Even Money on Bout Now

OMAHA, April 27.—Tiny Herman has shaved twenty pounds off his huge frame and announced himself as supremely confident that he will win his ten-round bout here tonight with Captain Bob Roper, former army champion. Herman will enter the ring weighing 215 pounds. Roper tips the scales at about 185.

Herman's superb condition has brought a decided change in the betting. Roper, until today, had been a heavy favorite at odds ranging from 2 to 1 to 3 to 2. Even money was the best Herman's friends could find today.

DO YOU KNOW?

"Who are the most versatile ball players in the major leagues?"

DIAMONDER.

Babe Ruth is perhaps the most versatile star as he plays first base, the outfield and is a star pitcher in addition to his slugging accomplishments. George Sisler is also a pitcher, an outfielder and a first baseman altho he never had the chance to distinguish himself in the box as Ruth had. Jimmy Johnston, the Brooklyn player is also a valuable all around man as he can play the outfield, second and third base and shortstop equally well.

"Is the term 'love' still applied officially in scoring lawn tennis?"

COURT FAN.

It is still used with propriety in some sections of the country. It probably can be considered official in as much as several efforts to have it abolished by the national body have failed. Umpires and officials in the middlewest who acted at the last national championship used the term "nothing" instead of love such as "Tilden 30, Johnston nothing."

"Is it true that Scotch golf bodies claim to have authority to make and change the rules of the game?"

M. R. P.

No. The Scotch governing bodies take the position that it is their game and that they can make the rules that apply to their own participation in the sport. They assume the position that these are our rules and if anyone else wants to change them it is up to them. It would be the same of foreign nations should try to make their own baseball rules at variance with the American rules.

Eight Clubs Join S. S. League List

The playing schedule for the first league games:

Grace M. E. vs. First M. E. at Landis field
Plymouth Congregational vs. Second Baptist at City park.
St. Paul M. E. vs Epworth M. E. at Twenty-second and J streets.
Westminster Presbyterian vs. Elm Park M. E. at Rock Island park.

SWEDISH AMATEURS GET NO CUT

Statements Credited Them With Paying Athletes to Perform.

Reports coming from Rome that the Swedes had admitted that they permitted their amateur athletes to share in the gate receipts for track and field meets at home nearly knocked the staid American purists off their chairs. It developed recently, however, that the statements of the Swede delegates to the International Olympic congress were misunderstood and that it was meant that the Swedes allowed smaller clubs to cut in on the money taken in at the meets of the big clubs.

What the clubs do with the cut of the dough is not known.

Introduction of the practice of paying the amateur athletes for their labors would provide a nice situation for some holding-out of real major league baseball dimensions and it would be good copy if the team should strike for more money before the gangplank was pulled up on the boat, Paris bound.

Peculiar Situation at Yale.

One of the queer turns that happen so many times in sport is taking place at Yale, where Ed Leader, the former rowing coach of Washington university is trying to [illegible] several unsatisfactory seats in the Eli varsity shell. Leader was brought on from the coast to take the coaching job at Yale upon the insistence of Pelly, captain of the Yale crew and a personal friend of the new coach. Pelly has been going so poorly this year that it seems certain he will not make the eight and Leader will be forced into the position of keeping the captain and his friends out of the varsity shell.

Pitching Ace to Become Priest.

Owen Carroll, the nineteen-year-old Holy Cross pitcher, is the sensation of the east, and he is being followed around by a flock of major league coaches with the papers [illegible] as bright as his prospects seem for a big league probably [illegible] company. He is [illegible] for the priesthood.

DEVELOP ATHLETES AMONG U. S. FORCES

War Department Starts Physical Development on Large Scale Because of Successful Results During War.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Since such highly successful results were acquired in the development of the physical and moral condition of the soldiers by extensive athletics in the training camps during the war times, the war department has gone into the promotion of athletics in the service on a large scale.

In the Third army corps, with headquarters at Camp Meade, near Baltimore, the post-war activities of the service have been developed to a conspicuous point of perfection.

Charley Herzog, former major league manager and player, was placed in charge of the area as general athletic director and he has been most successful in developing baseball, football and boxing among the soldiers.

One of the products went up for a trial with the New York Yanks this season, but he was released for more training. The area baseball team was one of the best in that section, and a remarkably good football team was developed last fall.

Two boxers, Bob Garcia a Mexican-Indian featherweight and Eddie Burnbrook a welterweight, have not only cleaned up everything among the soldiers but they give promise of getting a long ways in the professional game when they have completed their hitch in the service.

Garcia recently jumped into prominence when he gave Kid Williams, the former world's bantamweight, such a pasting that Williams sought a foul as the best means of escape.

Jimmy Bronson, who has developed a yen for soldier boxers since he brought out Bob Martin, the A. E. F. heavyweight champion, is handling both the boys, and he is doing what few managers in these commercial days are doing. He is taking his time with them and not yielding to the temptation to push them ahead of themselves into the big money.

Both boys recently finished their first enlistment and on the advice of Bronson they signed up for another hitch.

"The army is the best place for a boy who is just getting his start in this business. They've got to keep straight and live clean when they're in the service," Bronson says.

Garcia is the recognized featherweight champion of the army, and Burnbrook holds the welterweight title. Two years ago Burnbrook won the middleweight championship of the service, but he was trained down to the welterweight class by Sergeant Willie Hopfe, the coach and trainer of Camp Holabird.

Burnbrook is a powerful hitter, and is said by competent critics to be ready now for Mickey Walker, but he will be further seasoned before he is sent after the title.

Nine Lincoln High Track Men Entered

Nine Lincoln high school track men are entered in the Midland college invitation meet at Fremont, Friday. The members of the team include Captain Bill Fleming, Harold Peterson, William Weber, Charles Kitchen, E. Durisch, John Reasoner, Lester Edwards, Fulton McRea, Dalton Marrs, Assistant Coach Gautsch is in charge of the team.

Coach Browne took the baseball team to Omaha where Lincoln meets Omaha Tech Friday and Central, Saturday. Ineligibility kept five regulars from making the trip. Those who went were Yordy, catcher; Bill [illegible], pitcher; W. Bauer, first; Ro[illegible], second; Brown, shortstop; [illegible], third; McCarthy, leftfield; Winchester, centerfield; Delay, infield; Bauer, rightfield.

Hagen May Match Record of Braid

Since 1905 and 1906, when James Braid won the British open golf championship, no golfer has succeeded in winning the coveted title two years in succession, but Walter Hagen has a most excellent chance to do that stunt this year by repeating his victory of 1922. Hagen at the present time seems to be in invincible form and he has been playing a game that brands him as the greatest player of them all. Gene Sarazen, of course, has last fall's victory over him, but golf critics are almost unanimous in predicting that the little American open champion never will be able to repeat his sensational feats of last year.

Hagen is beginning his series of daily articles in the Journal May 1. He will "cover" all important matches on both sides of the Atlantic.

IF LUIS FIRPO CAN BEAT JACK M'AULIFFE II, HE MAY GET CHAMP

Luis Firpo rubbed by Trainer De Forest after a workout.

Argentina's bid for world ring honors—Luis Firpo—is getting into great shape for his bout here with Jack McAuliffe II. Whether the husky heavyweight from Buenos Aires gets a crack at Jack Dempsey will depend to a great extent on the ability he shows in the bout with McAuliffe. Firpo of course, will have to win or drop back to third and fourth rate class.

THIRTY ROUNDS ON GUARDS' MITT CARD

All Principals Are Ready for Gong After Afternoon of Light Workouts—Negro Bout Arouses Interest.

Fight Facts.

Main event—Battling Strayer, Lincoln, vs Len Schwabel, St. Paul, Minn., ten rounds. (Lightweights.)
Semi-windup—Ace Hudkins, Lincoln, vs Johnny Harris Des Moines, Ia., eight rounds. (Featherweights.)
Battling Monroe, New York, vs Gorilla Jones, six rounds. (Negro light heavyweights.)
Speed Wise, New York, vs Jack Lanabe, Lincoln, three rounds. (Flyweights.)
Kid Haberman, York, vs Floyd Kitchen, Lincoln, three rounds. (Lightweights.)
Starting time—8:15 p. m.
Place—Auditorium
Referee—Tommy Ryan.
Auspices—National Guards' club.

Following an afternoon of light workouts every principal on the card which the National Guards' club will present at the auditorium Friday night, reported themselves to be in condition.

Bat Strayer, who meets Schwabel in the windup, went three fast rounds with Johnny Harris, who appears in the semi-windup against Hudkins. Harris was still showing that nasty looking left hand to advantage.

Floyd Kitchen, one of the preliminary boys, took on Strayer after Harris got thru. Floyd got in the way of a look which proved most unfortunate for Floyd. Strayer appears to be at the top of his form.

Considerable interest seems to be aroused over the appearance of Battling Monroe, New York, and Gorilla Jones, Omaha. Both are negro light heavies. Those who have seen Gorilla in action claim he keeps things moving all the time. Monroe has met some of the best at his weight. Everything presages a warm six rounds when these "skillet blonds" get together.

Indians Now Lead American League

NEW YORK, April 27.—Change in the leadership of the American league was the most important result of yesterday's major league games.

The Cleveland Indians beat the White Sox and assumed the lead while the Yanks dropped to second place by losing to the Red Sox.

By beating the Reds the St. Louis Cards jumped from seventh to sixth place in the National league and the Braves fell from sixth place to the cellar when the Giants beat them.

One inning rallies were again prominent. The Giants scored six runs in the eighth inning to beat the Braves; the Cards scored six runs in the fourth to beat the Reds. Brooklyn scored five runs in the sixth to beat the Phils and the Pirates scored four runs in the second to beat the Cubs.

By John Casey.

When Bat Strayer and Len Schwabel crawl thru the ropes for their ten-round tilt at the auditorium Friday night, a complicated situation should be cleared up. Bat recently fought an eight round draw with Young O'Hara of Ft. Dodge after conceding him eight pounds. Roscoe Hall lost to O'Hara, but held Schwabel to a draw. Schwabel holds a decision over Strayer by having a slight edge in their last rumpus. Both boxers will go the limit to win and this should result in a great treat for the fans.

Strayer, who has been meeting the best of them in Iowa and Illinois rings turned down two battles so that he could get another crack at Schwabel. Tom Jones had offers for Strayer to box in Chicago April 26 and Quincy, Ill., May 1 and was disappointed as the Battler is a great card in Illinois. Strayer's last battle was against Jack Barnhart whom he defeated in ten rounds at Terre Haute, Ind. Barnhart has boxed draws with Charlie White and Ever Hammer.

Has Met the Best.

Schwabel has met and defeated some of the best lightweights in the country and is confident of his ability to take Strayer's measure. A glance at Schwabel's record shows decisions over Submarine Smith, Russie LeRoy, Reddy Blanchard, Jackie Conley, Jack O'Toole and many others of like ability.

Ace Hudkins and Johnny Harris in the semi-windup should put on a wonderful battle. Harris shows plenty of speed and has a left hand which he whips over with deadly accuracy. Ace is in fine shape, ready and anxious for the first gong. This is Hudkins' first appearance in Lincoln tho he has been winning steadily in all recent battles in the state.

Negroes to Go Six Rounds.

Those who like the big boys will be satisfied when Battling Monroe, Sioux City, and "Gorilla" Jones, Omaha, who meet in the six-round preliminary, get together. The two dark complexioned entries have good records and are out to win in the shortest time possible.

St. Louis is not contending for the democratic national convention.

MUDDY ROADS LOAD TRAINS

BULK IN LOCAL TRAVEL REPORTED BY RAILWAYS.

Highway Trips Are Infrequent Now Because of the Mud and Threatening Condition of the Weather.

Muddy roads are overloading local trains now. Auto trips are less frequent becaues of the mud and the threatening condition of the weather. local travel for the roads, the two inches and better rainfall having softened the best kept highways so that usual speed and comfort cannot be enjoyed.

Superintendent of Streets Overton says that dragging Lincoln's dirt streets after a rainy spell presents a problem with the equipment now at hand. There is usually about one day afte ra rain when dragging can be best done. It requires six times that long to cover the dirt streets. That means that the job must be started before the streets are ready to drag and that it must be continued after the streets are too dry to drag.

Friday morning's weather report showed a considerable area in the southwest corner of the state covered by rain of from half to a quarter of an inch, following the inch and better that was reported from the same stations the day before. Reports indicate that the greater part of the southwest corner of the state has had in excess of two inches of rainfall during the past week.

A morning market report showed these conditions at 8 a. m.:

Grand Island—Cloudy and cooler.
Beatrice—Light rain falling. Cooler.
Fairbury—Rain falling lightly for past three hours.
Geneva—Partly cloudy and cool; light rain
Kansas City and Topeka—Cooler; drizzling rain.

The same report showed rain at Wichita and many places in western Kansas and in Oklahoma, the rain reaching as far east in the early morning as central Missouri.

MISS CUPID NOW TIES THE WEDDING KNOT

Rev Miss Norman Brown weds couple

Instead of the "Rev. Mr." mentioned in innumerable wedding announcements, it was the Rev. Miss Norman Brown who performed the wedding ceremony when Miss Helen L. Rogers, her cousin, of Chicago, became the bride there of Arthur Neal. Miss Brown was ordained a minister when only eighteen. She comes from a family of clergymen and has the distinction of having been the only woman minister in the Illinois state senate, an office she held two years ago.

LOOTED SAFE BOXES FOUND IN PASTURE

Recover Metal Cash Container of Coryell Oil Station Safe Which Was Burglarized Early Thursday.

An iron box containing two metal drawers, that are believed to be a part of the Coryell Oil company safe that was cracked by yeggs and robbed of $800 early Thursday, is in the hands of police. The box was found in a small pasture near the scene of the robbery, Fourteenth and W streets, by Jenny Stoddard, 931 North Sixteenth This box had contained the cash of two days' receipts of the oil station.

Captain of Detectives Anderson says that the yeggs may be the men who attempted to stage a robbery at the same place last January. It is the same kind of a job, according to the captain. He believes that one man waited a short distance away with an auto while his companions pulled the job. Mr. Stoddard who lives a short distance from the station says that he heard the sound of a shot at about 2 a. m. Thursday and a few minutes later he heard an auto speed away. Police have a good description of three men who were seen by Mr. Stoddard walking down the railroad tracks near his home. He says that they were suspicious looking characters. The robbery is thought by police to be the work of out of town men.

Fire Attorney Listens to Pleas of Mr. and Mrs. John Losky, But Reaches Hospital Late.

CHICAGO, April 27.—The stork traveled at high speed today to catch an auto in which Shirley T. High, fire attorney, was speeding to investigate two incendiary fires, but the old bird lapped the fire wagon.

High, rushing to the Wilson avenue district to investigate blazes which followed bomb explosion in two exclusive millinery shops, was hailed frantically by Mr. and Mrs. John Losky, who begged the officer to take them to a hospital.

The attorney bundled them into his machine and stepped on the gas, but before the hospital was reached the stork left an eight pound baby boy in the machine.

Steady nerves depend on the condition of your Blood

YOU know that! You also know that your loved ones' sympathy and comfort will not correct the cause. Neither can impoverished blood rebuild the body. But you can remedy this condition by restoring your blood to its normal state. Remember, your blood flows through your body—when you are awake and when you are asleep. It's the great body agent which makes life. And when there's life—there's happiness. Stronger and more useful nerves depend on blood-power.

Here is your opportunity. S. S. S. will prove to you its "why" and "how" reason. S. S. S. contains only purely vegetable medicinal ingredients. Because S. S. S. does build blood-power, it routs rheumatism, stops pimples, blackheads, boils, eczema, beautifies the complexion, builds you up when you are run down, and makes your nerves steady!

Mr. W. T. Hooker, 2321 Proctor Street, Port Arthur, Texas, writes: "I suffered from Eczema for seven years and was afflicted with nervousness. I tried S.S.S. and six bottles cured me. I now enjoy good health. I think S.S.S. the only sure cure for blood disorders on the market."

Try it yourself. S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores. The large size is more economical. Get a bottle today!

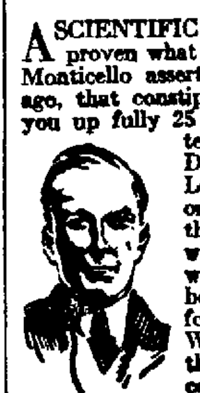
Spoonful for a Penny Brings Quick Relief

Prove splendid laxative properties of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin by test



A SCIENTIFIC test has now proven what Dr. Caldwell of Monticello asserted many years ago, that constipation will slow you up fully 25 per cent. The test was made by Dr. Donaldson of Loma Linda upon four men in the prime of life who deliberately went without a bowel movement for four days. Within 48 hours the men had coated tongue and foul breath, cankers in the mouth, no appetite, restless sleep, indigestion, headache, depression, nervousness, cramps. The blood pressure was up 28 per cent. It is just this that Dr. Caldwell has preached to his patients in private and to the public through the printed word ever since he began the practice of his specialty, diseases of the stomach and bowels, back in 1875.

After observing for years the satisfactory effect of his prescription for constipation, he placed it in drug stores in 1892, a simple vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics, now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. That was 30 years ago, and today over 10 million bottles are bought annually, the largest selling family laxative in the world. You will find it in any drug store you enter, a generous-size bottle costing you less than a cent a dose.

Every member of the family from the infants to the grandparents can use it with safety. It is gentle and mild. The formula is on the package. Mrs. Roy Cook of Bellefontaine, O., has been giving it to her 5-months old baby, who now weighs 19 pounds; and Mr. J. B. Dawson of Brinson, Ga., declares it the best laxative his family has ever found. Try a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for constipation or any of its symptoms. The results will delight you. And the cost is only one cent a dose.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Why Not Feel Youthful —and Be Beautiful?

Science Offers You Lyke, the Great General Tonic, to Give You Health, Strength, Attraction

Men who win in business and women whose beauty and charm make them popular in society are invariably healthy people. It is health which gives the vivacious spirits, the sparkling eyes and the attractive personality which brings success and makes friends.

Thousands of people have awakened to the importance of keeping the body in normal condition and have found wonderful help in Lyko, the great general tonic.

Take, for instance, Mr. Mitchell Murray, well known in northern Missouri. Mr. Murray writes, "When I began to take Lyko I was so weak I could hardly walk across the room. Now I am able to do a pretty fair day's work and my neighbors are surprised at the effect."

Mr. W. L. Lawler of Alabama says: "This is one of the greatest tonics for vitality, digestion and liver trouble. A general rebuilder for run-down persons. It made me an entirely new man at 55. I feel like I am only 30 years of age today."

These are only two out of the multitudes of letters from grateful people who have recovered their strength and energy by the aid of Lyko and who recommend it as the best medicine they have ever used to restore the system to its normal, healthy state.

The amazing power of Lyko to quickly build up run-down people is due to the fact that it acts on all parts of the system. It is a great general tonic compounded from pure medicinal ingredients, each of which has its own special properties.

One of these ingredients is a mild but efficient laxative which cleanses the bowels and keeps one free from constipation, another acts beneficially on the liver and kidneys, a third aids digestion so that the body absorbs the full strength from the food, another steadies the nerves and helps to overcome sleeplessness, irritability and nervous depression. There is not an ailing part of the body which does not feel the benefit of Lyko.

If you suffer from the effects of sickness, overwork or worry; if you have indigestion, constipation or kidney trouble, if you are bilious; if you lie awake nights; if you lack that energy and spirit which wins success and popularity put Lyko at work to build up your strength and vitality. See how soon you will feel like new. Lyko is sold by all reliable druggists. Ask for it today

FEAR MOB TO CHEAT STATE

Boy Convict Spirited Away From Rome, Ga., Jail.

THREATENED ON DEATH DAY

Taken From Rome to Lafayette for Execution.

Authorities Believed George Baker, Hanged Friday, Might Be a Victim of Mob Violence.

LAFAYETTE, Ga., April 27.—George Baker, nineteen years old, was executed here today for the murder of Deputy Sheriff Norton, while his fifteen-year-old brother Ralph, protested that he alone was responsible for the crime.

Baker walked to his death calmly, waving farewell to a crowd assembled in the jail yard a few minutes before he was taken from his cell.

The youth was rushed here from Rome shortly before he was scheduled to be hung there, when a crowd assembled near the jail and threatened to take charge of the proceedings.

ROME, Ga., April 27.—Fearing a mob would cheat the state of its right to take the life of George Baker, nineteen, sheriffs spirited the youth to Lafayette on the dawn of his execution day.

Announcement was made here, after Baker had been rushed away that the hanging would take place between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. in the Lafayette jail yard.

Members of the family had just concluded last prayers shortly before dawn in the narrow cell here when Sheriff R. E. Wilson led Baker to a waiting motor car and dashed away while small groups of townspeople gathered outside the jail watched the flight.

Ralph Baker, fifteen-year-old, whose death sentence was commuted to life imprisonment, begged to be taken along and continued the demand that he be given the privilege of dying with his brother on the gallows.

"I am the one that killed him," the boy wept, referring to the murder of a deputy sheriff for which both boys were tried. "George didn't have a pistol. If either of us is to hang it ought to be me."

Members of the family planned to leave this morning for Lafayette, with the exception of the eighteen-year-old wife of George, who pleaded that she be allowed to remain here until the noose had ended the life of her husband of eighteen months.

George Baker was calm and composed when deputies hustled him out of his cell this morning. He was resigned to his fate and declared that tho he was innocent he was determined not to flinch.

Five Questions for Middle Age.

"Nothing is more disgraceful than that an old man should have nothing to show that he has lived long except his years."—Seneca.

Of course you are not old.

I would not for the world suggest such a thing. People so seldom are old—only to be some day. One of my best friends is a man of seventy-two who often says what he will do "when I am an old man."

But you must admit that you are getting a little older each day. And if you do not want to run any risk of meriting Seneca's reproof you ought to be storing up "something to show that you have lived long besides your years." Are you?

What We Lose.

As we grow older we unquestionably lose some beautiful qualties. We lose some of the enthusiasm of youth, some of its divine hopefulness, some of its passionate belief that the world can be made right by this or that reform. ("For my part," says Stevenson, "I look back to the time when I was a socialist with something like regret.") What are we getting in return for these losses?

Here are a few suggestions for stock taking.

It seems to me that a person who ripens instead of souring into old age ought to be less positive as the years go by. A positive young person is a perfectly natural manifestation. A positive old person is a person who has been positive, found himself wrong ("even as you and I") a thousand times, and still learned no lesson. Are you growing less positive with the years?

Things We Ought to Save.

The gracious old person ought to be less selfish. Surely, life has taught us little if it has not helped us to realize that happiness does not come from constantly grasping our own good and our own way. Are you growing any less selfish as you grow older-

A well-balanced older person usually talks less as he learns more. It was a wise old owl, you remember, who lived in the oak. It could not possibly have been a young one. You remember him, don't you? "The more he heard, the less he spoke; the less he spoke, the more he heard—why aren't we all like that old bird?"

Are You More or Less Tolerant?

Do you grew more tolerant as you grow older? Or does your vision grow narrower, your prejudices grow stronger? If you will let it, life will widen your vision. "It is only necessary to grow old to become more charitable and even indulgent," says Goethe. "I see no fault committed by others that I have not committed myself." Surely this must have been a successful old age.

Are you growing a bit more patient each year? It is inevitably a little sad to lose the beautiful eagerness and hopefulness of youth, but ten times more sad to lose them if a compensating patience—which is, in its way, a larger, serener hopefulness—does not take its place. Are you more patient in both the big and little things of life as the years go by?

Tomorrow—Personality in Insects.

LATE NEWS OF YESTERDAY

BOYS AND GIRLS TO ENTER A CONTEST

Journal Provides Chance for Pupils in Lincoln Schools to Win Excellent Prizes by Writing Essays.

A contest! How that word does excite one!

Is there a boy or girl in Lincoln who does not love a contest—a chance to try one's skill and perhaps even capture a prize? Is there one with so little "pep" or ambition that the announcement of such an opportunity does not at least arouse his or her interest?

Every child in the Lincoln public schools from the sixth grade to the last year in the high school will have a chance to win a handsome prize which will be given away in the essay contest which the Nebraska State Journal is conducting. Twenty-two gifts provided by Lincoln merchants will be given away to the boys and girls submitting the best manuscripts on the subject, "What I Would Have in My Home."

The manuscripts must be limited to two hundred words and must be submitted by Saturday night May 12 to the contest editor of The State Journal. Three judges will pass upon the manuscripts for each grade in the school. Boys and girls who love to write will have a chance to try out their ability in this line and measure their skill against those in other schools in the city. It will be great fun and in addition there is the hope of winning a handsome reward. Look up the advertisement of this contest in the paper and prepare at once to enter it. Study the rules carefully as your chances of winning depend upon how well you comply with certain requirements of the contest.

Members Appropriate for Tuberculosis, Prepare to Ride to Omaha and Show Signs of Peace.

With eradication of bovine tuberculosis hanging in the balance under call of the house for nearly an hour Thursday, those who had fought a losing battle thruout the session were rewarded by seeing it make the grade on third reading. The vote was 61 to 35. The bill carries an appropriation of $285,000 for eradication during the next two years. H. R. 668 is a companion piece of H. R. 584 which carries the machinery and provides that at least 85 per cent of the total shall be spent in counties which come under the area test plan.

Nine democrats voted with fifty-two republicans for eradication. Four republicans voted with thirty-one democrats against the bill. Minority men who swung in line to erase the disease:

Bock, Broome, Davis of Fillmore, Johnson, Kemper, O'Gara, Osterman, Otteman Yochum of Otoe.

The four republicans who voted with a majority of the democrats against the bill:

Hall, Nelson, Pollard, Strehlow.

When the call of the house was lifted and the result announced, a mighty burst of applause swept the room. The membership then did a thing which smoke advocates have failed to do all season—the ban was lifted. Smokes were produced. It was like the signing of a treaty of peace—peace for a day.

BIG BILL IN CONFERENCE

Tuberculosis Appropriation of $285,000 May Cause Legislature to Stay in Session.

The senate appointed Reed, Anderson and Purcell to represent it on a conference committee with the house to thresh out differences on the general appropriation bill, H. R. 672, Thursday afternoon. The house picked Burke, Mears and C. L. Yochum. The conference committee did not really get down to work before but will do so Friday. The bill provides for code activities with the exception of salaries of code secretaries which is covered in another bill. Both houses are likely to agree upon some amendment to the code bill form of government, but whatever it may be it will be vetoed by Governor Bryan, according to leaders of the legislature, so it matters little whether the two houses ever agree upon a code form of government. In either event the present code law will stand, say the wise ones, and perhaps the governor will not care if it does.

Senator Wilkins spent the day compiling items carried in the appropriation bill as it passed to the senate. He finds that it left the senate carrying a grand total of $19,446,615.66. Of that amount $14,371,036.20 is to be raised mainly by taxation, and $5,075,579.46 comes from cash funds, collections and federal funds.

As the bill left the house it carried a total of $20,380,533.20, or $15,304,953.74 from taxation and $5,075,579.46 from cash and federal funds.

The bill as recommended by Governor Bryan carried a total of $20,948,960.36, or $15,873,380.90 from taxation and $5,075,579.46 from cash and federal funds.

The senate received H. R. 668, appropriating $285,000 for eradication of tuberculosis, late in the afternoon from the house. The bill was given a first and second reading under suspension of the rules and referred to the committee on finance.

By a bare majority the senate passed H. R. 451, a bill amending the Sackett law which Governor Bryan desires. It permits the governor to suspend officers who may be charged with failing to enforce laws pending a trial in the supreme court. The present law [illegible] suspension [illegible] appointment of a successor during pendency of charges and a trial. The rollcall on the passage of the bill resulted:

Ayes—Allen, Anderson, Barr, Bliss, Fries, Good, Hastings, Illian, Meacham, Osborne, Purcell, Rickard, Shellenbarger, Sturdevant, Wiltse, Wilkins, Warner—17.

Nays—Banning, Behrens, Chambers, Cooper, Gumb, Johnson, Kroh, Larkin, McGowan, Reed, Reifeurath, Robbins, Saunders, Thielen, Tomek—15.

Absent and not voting—Smrha.

H. R. 628, requiring establishment of chairs of eclectic and homeopathic medicine in the university medical college, an old favorite, was indefinitely postponed on recommendation of the standing committee. Sturdevant moved to place the bill on the general file and defended its provisions. Anderson of Lancaster opposed the bill and presented an argument against it. A rollcall on the motion to file was defeated by a vote of 7 to 23. Those who voted for the bill were Banning, Barr, McGowan, Osborne, Rickard, Shellenbarger, and Sturdevant. The absentees were Kroh, Smrha and Wilkins. Thielen explained his negative vote by saying he did not believe any professional school should be supported by taxation but that such schools should be self supporting.

H. R. 622, the Lincoln city school levy bill was reported for the general file with an amendment which provides that the school board may by a two-thirds vote submit to a general or primary election, state or city, a proposition to submit the amount of the annual expenditure by mill levy instead of a gross sum, not to exceed twenty mills on the dollar valuation, a majority vote being necessary to carry such a proposition. The bill as it came from the house limits the expenditure to $1,200,000 with no referendum.

H. R. 488 dealing with the Omaha street railway franchise which expires in 1928 was killed. Chambers made the motion, seconded by Saunders, stating that subsequent legislature can dispose of the question.

The committee on highways was reversed when it recommended the killing of H. R. 393, a bill by Osterman.

EXHIBIT IS STAGED BY THE ENGINEERS

Several Thousand People Visit the University and Viey Annual Show Put on By College of Engineering.

Several thousand people visited the university campus and viewed the innumerable exhibits of the engineering college students Thursday evening, on the occasion of the annual engineers' night. All divisions of the engineering department were thrown open to the public, a radio concert was in progress in the armory, a minature volcano was in eruption and movies showing industrial processes were exhibited in the chemistry building.

Practically every building on the campus boasted an exhibit of some sort. In the mechanical arts building, concrete beams and iron rods were broken in the material testing exhibit. Every variety of civil and agricultural engineering instruments were shown in the armory. King Tut's plow, fashioned of wood, was also on display there. A minature oil well was a feature of the geology exhibit in the museum. In the electrical engineering building, leaping electric arcs crakled and flared as the student operators manipulated the switches. Every type of electric motor was on display and in operation. The university radio broadcasting station was open to inspection. A miraculous coffee pot, from which a constant stream of dark colored liquid flowed with no apparent source for the unending supply, was a center of interest.

LINCOLN SCHOOL LEVY BILL

Makes Belated Appearance in the Senate and May Be Speedily Disposed of—Bills Passed.

S. F. 222, by Cooper, creating a bureau of forestry in the college of agriculture and providing for a state forester, was indefinitely postponed.

The following bills were passed by the senate with little or no opposition:

AUTHORITIES KNOW GIRLS' ASSAILANT

Names of Two Men Who Attacked Girls and Left Them Along Road Have Been Learned But No Prosecution.

GRAND ISLAND, Neb., April 26.—The name of one of the two men who attacked two of three girls whom they had taken out in an auto presumably to attend a dance at Hastings, last Saturday night, is now known as well as the surname of the second. Attending physicians are reported to be fixed in the opinion that the two who were struck, one receiving a bad gash over the eye and the other having a tooth knocked out, were not struck with bare fists but with knuckles. The second man did none of the striking but finally persuaded the other to desist. The identity of the three girls who were finally left at the wayside at 10:30 at night, fourteen miles from home, is also known. No steps have been taken thus far, however, to arrest the men, owing to the reluctance of the girls to reveal themselves to the public in the way that would be necessary were prosecution to follow.

Assistant Professor Stepanek was given a year's leave of absence to fit himself for extending the work in Bohemian language and literature. On his return he becomes an associate professor in the department of modern languages. His time not devoted to the teaching of the Bohemian language and literature will be given to work in the department of English as at present.

TWO MEN BADLY INJURED

Members of Construction Crew Hurt While Working on Railroad Near Fremont.

FREMONT, Neb., April 26—Edwin J. Lunn, twenty-six, Bonesteel, S. D., and A. Peterson, twenty-three, members of a Northwestern construction crew, were seriously injured late Wednesday afternoon when they were struck by a piledriver. The crew was working at the Chautauqua siding, a mile west of Fremont. The injured men were working at the base of the driver when something broke in the mechanism of the machine allowing the heavy weight to descend. Peterson attempted to scramble to one side but one arm was caught beneath the driver and badly mangled. Lunn is more seriously hurt, suffering internal injuries, doctors believe. A hurry call to Fremont brought an ambulance to the scene and the victims were rushed to the Fremont hospital. Their escape from instant death is considered miraculous.

GLOBE DELIVERY FILES SUIT

Attempts to Prevent American State Bank et al from Disposing of Promissory Notes.

A temporary restraining order was signed Thursday afternoon by District Judge Morning on the application of the Globe delivery company, prohibiting the American State bank, the directors of the American Trust company, and others, from disposing of any of the notes signed by the Globe delivery company as security for payments on the purchase of stock from the American Trust company. The Globe delivery company's petition also asked that the Continental state bank be required to surrender into court the shares of stock involved with the notes.

The board of directors of the American Trust company is said in the petition to contain the following defendants: George M. Christian, Charles A. Herman, John B. Wright, Fenton B. Fleming, Barvin B. Levy, Stanley G. Zemer and Isaac W. Bradt.

It is alleged that the American Trust company was owner of 241 shares of stock in the Globe Delivery company, and that the Globe Delivery contracted to purchase the stock on the amortization plan for a total of $16,870, payments to be made in sixty installments extending over five years. That Thomas C. Burtsch was set forth as an expert accountant competent to compute the amounts due each month from the delivery company, that Burtsch figured incorrectly, and that the Globe delivery company paid more on their first seventeen installments than it should have been required to pay; that payment on the stock was secured by sixty promissory notes, and the shares held by the American Trust company as collateral to secure payment on the notes. That notes one to three were paid, and notes 35 to 60 were delivered to Mr. Warner as receiver of the American State bank to settle accounts; that notes 3 to 34 were delivered to defendants Christian, Herman, John B. Wright, Fleming, Levy, Zemeer and Bradt, and that the defendant Jessie Wright claims to have some interest in some of the notes.

Since that time, according to the petition, the plaintiff company paid off notes four to sixteen, and also ninteen and $400 on notes seventeen and eighteen. It is charged that the Continental State bank has wrongfully taken possession of the 241 shares of stock.

The plaintiff company asked for a temporary restraining order preventing the disposal of any of the notes, for a court order requiring the surrender into court of the shares of stock, and for judgment for the amount alleged to have been overpaid. Hearing on the application was set for May 8.

INJUNCTION SUIT CONTINUED

Litigation to Prevent Building of Dam at Capital Beach Goes Over Until Next Week.

The injunction suit of Tillman Flader and land owners located near Capital Beach against the Central Realty & Investment company, in which the plaintiffs seek to halt the proposed dam to replenish the falling waters of Salt Lake, will not be entirely presented to the court this week. Widow's pension work and juvenile court work were scheduled to take up the rest of this week's time for Judge Morning.

A witness for the plaintiffs Thursday afternoon was Prof. Carl E Mickey, of the state university, who testified as to the possible effect of the installation of the proposed dam upon surrounding farm lands.

He said that a barricade to stop the drainage of water might watersoak the farm land in question, in his opinion and cause alkali to rise again as it used to do. Much of his testimony was used with a view to corroborating testimony already offered by land owners and other witnesses.

The case will be stopped at noon Friday and probably taken up again Monday morning.

CLINTON CENTER MEETING

Playlet Followed by Business Meeting and Political Speakers With Ed Schroeder Presiding.

The Clinton community center meeting Thursday evening was preceded by a short play given by the dramatic department of the center, entitled "The Rev. Peter Bryce." Mrs. Eileen Harrison presided over a short business meeting for a time and later called Dr. Spealman to the chair. The constitution and by laws of the center, drafted by a community, were read and adopted. Dr. Spealman then turned the meeting over to E. H. Shroder who, he said, had prepared the program. The speakers were candidates C. A. Lord, Frank Mills, Paul Dennis, A. P. Cowgill and A. J. Weyant. Later C. L. Rein and George A. Adams were called upon and spoke, Mr. Rein soliciting all to vote their sentiments and Mr. Adams urging a vote against the present commissioners because they hadn't elected C. W. Bryan mayor but instead "had said damn the majority." All the candidates announced themselves in favor of municipal ownership.

The business meeting of the community center was adjourned after adopting the constitution until May 10.

TORNADO VICTIMS BURIED

Services for Mother and Two Daughters Killed at Barneston Held at Beatrice.

BEATRICE, Neb., April 26.—Funeral services for Mrs. Fern Bruensbach and her two daughters, Evelyn, aged three, and Willa, two years old, victims of the tornado which destroyed property to the value of over $20,000 in the vicinity of Barneston, Monday afternoon, were held Thursday afternoon from the home of Oscar Dalton, father of Mrs. Bruensbach. The three caskets were almost buried in flowers, and the services were largely attended. Clyde Bruensbach, husband and father of the victims of the storm, is still in a critical condition, but it is believed he will recover.

Farmers living in the vicinity of the storm southeast of Barneston are now engaged in assisting their unfortunate neighbors. A dozen farm homes were damaged together with out buildings.

FARM BLOC HAS A MEETING

One Hundred and Twenty-five Members of House at Dinner at Windsor Hotel.

A legislative farm bloc banquet held at the Windsor hotel Thursday evening was attended by over one hundred and twenty-five members of the house. Thirteen of the solons gave talks. The speaking was started off by I. W. Jacoby, chairman of the bloc. He told of an organization of twenty-six farm legislators being effected at a meeting held February 16. The purpose of the bloc is and was to champion farm legislation in the house. At the initial meeting a committee of three was chosen to present bills for discussion. Several meetings have been held.

The legislators made merry during the meal. A jazz orchestra and the house of representatives quartet furnished music. Members of the quartet are, Messars, Ball, Johnson, Reese and Colman. The meeting was turned over to Toastmaster L. G. Yochum following an address of welcome by Daniel Garber of Red Cloud.

FARMERS WANT ELECTRICITY

Ask Special Election to Vote Bonds for Light and Power.

FREMONT, Neb., April 26.—A petition was filed in district court today requesting that a special election be called to allow the residents of a proposed Scribner rural electric district No. 1 vote on a $90,000 bond issue for the establishment of the district and the construction of light and power lines. This is the first petition for a charter to be filed under the passage of the new amendments by the legislature on April 18. A district had been created previously in Saunders county but due to technicalities on the levying of taxes was found to be illegal. The petition is signed by seventy-eight free holders. Should the bond issue be approved, an electric light and power line, connecting with the plant at Scribner will be constructed.

Hundred at Annual Dinner at the Grand Hotel Thursday Night.

A hundred pre-medical students and their guests attended the annual Nu-Med banquet Thursday evening, held at the Grand hotel. Eleven new members of the Theta Nu fraternity were tapped during the course of the evening. They were: V. G. Casten, R. Everett, D. Ehlers, E. Emmck, W. Hay, J. Moritz, J. Van Valin, F. Abbott, J. Hughes, H. Scholz and R. Lorance.

Dr. A. R. Mitchell was one of the principal speakers. He gave some practical pointers to the students, and told of the history of medicine and surgery. Prof. R. J. Pool, head of the university department of botany, spoke on biogolical subjects and of the development of man.

Prof. Ernest Anderson, head of the department of chemistry, gave reasons why the modern physician must be a chemist. Dr. D. D. Sanderson, an old practioneer of Lincoln, drew examples from his long experience, and gave his audience some advice on practical medicine. Prof. F. D. Barker made a snort address on premedic day, to be held next Friday. Over three hundred students from the state university will go to Omaha for the day. Celebrations will be held and the halls of the medical college there will be open to them so that they may see what life at the college is.

Places were arranged for sixteen at one large table and included the members of the families and the bridal attendants. Miss Frances Whitmore will act as bridesmaid and Ernest Grainger will be his brother's best man. Tall pink lighted tapers in silver candleholders harmonized with the centerpiece on the table which was a large silver bowl of Columbia roses. A bridal effect was featured in the place cards. The evening was spent at bridge.

MERE MENTION

A decree annuling the marriage of Marguerite Munger Lynn to Norman Lynn was entered Thursday afternoon in district court by Judge Morning. It was alleged, and found by the court, that when the marriage was entered into the defendant was not mentally competent to marry. The plaintiff's maiden name of Munger was restored.

A peace warrant was filed against Jake Strackbein in Justice of Peace W. T. Stevens' court Thursday by Leone Dillon. He pleaded innocence when arraigned. The case was continued until May 25. Mr. Strackbein was released on personal recognizance of $500. The complainant says that she has reason to fear that the defendant will beat, strike and wound her.

Dora Crabtree filed suit Thursday afternoon in district court against Burt F. Powell, I. F. Jones, and S. W. Babor, the latter as the Cheyenne Wells Land company, and Louis H. Pflug as agent of the company. The plaintiff asks damages in the sum of $5,600.97, alleging that the defendants sold her land in Cheyenne county, Colorado, misrepresenting its value and earning capacity.

Edward H. Jackson, filed suit for $5,000 damages Thursday morning in district court against the Liggitt & Meyers tobacco company, alleging that on February 13, 1923, one of the company's drivers struck him with a car at Twenty-seventh and R streets. He claimed his collar bone was broken, and that he suffered internal injuries. He claimed the driver of the truck approached without warning, and that he was speeding.

Jacob Mohr was fined $100 and costs Thursday by Justice of Peace W. T. Stevens after pleading guilty to a charge of illegal possession of intoxicating liquor. Mr. Mohr was unable to pay the fine and was committed to serve time in the county jail. He was arrested late Monday when a quantity of hooch, some mash and a still were found in his home by state and police officers. Mr. Mohr pleaded innocennce to a charge of illegal sale but it was dismissed.

Robert Lee a seven-year old colored boy living at 1944 R street, returned home about 10 o'clock Thursday night after having been lost sight of for about six hours. He told his mother that an old white man had grabbed him and a white boy and had shut them up in the basement of a house "about three or four blocks away from school." The white boy was released very soon, says Robert, but the old man did not release him until about 6. There was a play at the school house during the evening, so Robert says that he spent the rest of his time there. Mrs. Lee had told the police officers earlier in the evening that she believed her son was kidnaped, since hehad never run away before.

Trial of the suit of Oscar H. Enslow against C. H. Frey, in which the plaintiff asks $2,500 judgment alleging that Mr. Frey violated the terms of a contract, was begun Thursday afternoon before District Judge Stewart. It is alleged that the defendant entered into an agreement to purchase the Enslow Floral company's fixtures and stock of wares, and to pay for them the sum of $4,197.60. It is alleged that $1,500 of the purchase price was to be paid in cash, $197.60 on an account owing to the defendant by the plaintiff, and $2,500 in stock of a floral company which it was alleged the defendant agreed to incorporate. It is charged that the cash was paid, and the account settled, but that the defendant failed to incorporate the floral company.

Stevens late Thursday on charges of illegal possession and illegal transportation of intoxicating liquor. They will be given a hearing at 2 p. m. Monday. Each gave $500 bond for his release. The trio, said to be from Omaha, was taken in custody Wednesday afternoon by State Sheriff Carroll on the highway near Havelock. It is alleged that a bottle of liquor was found in the auto.

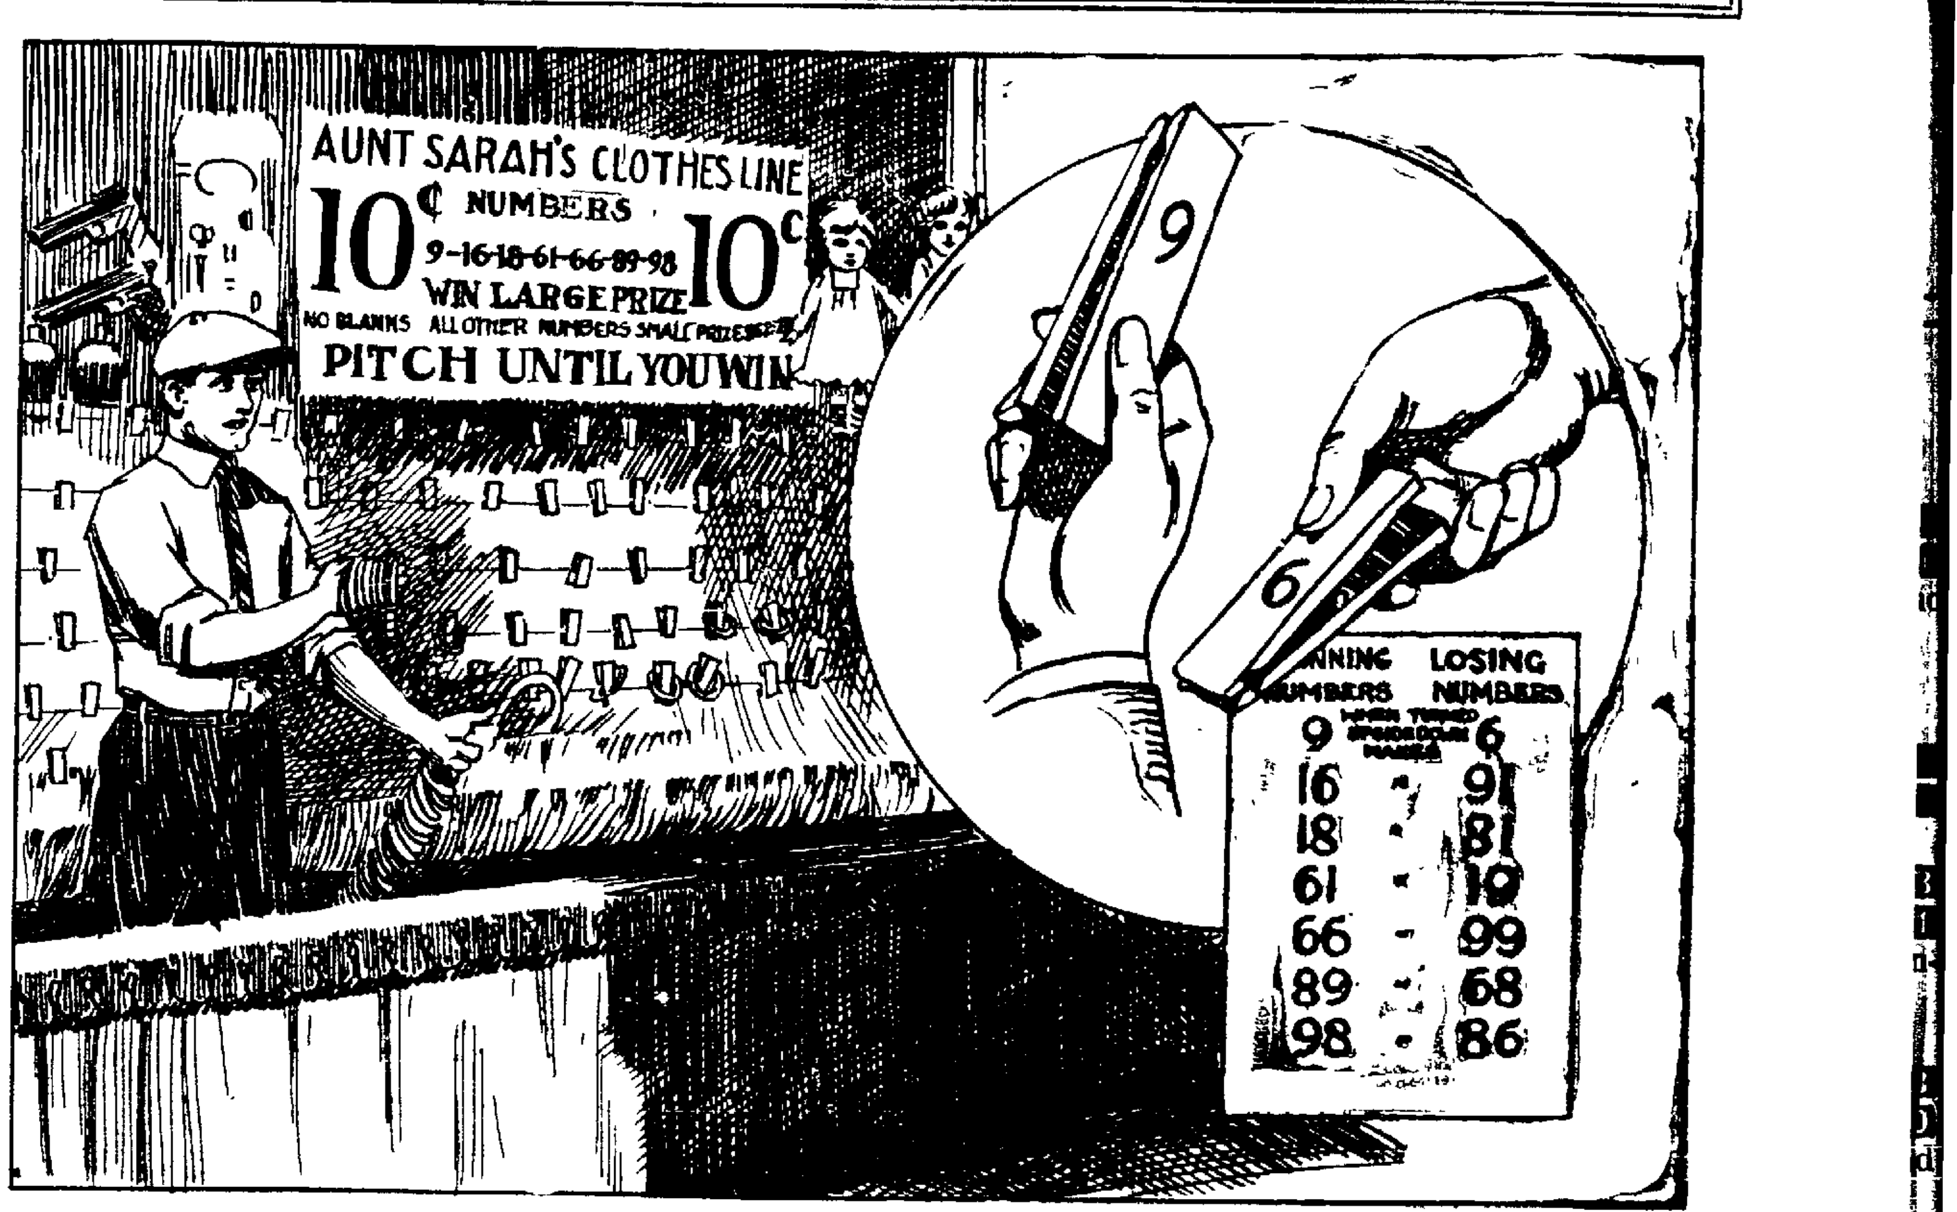
BUNCO GAMES TO BEWARE OF

BY WALTER B. GIBSON.



Hoop Tossing.

One of the most popular and interesting of carnival games is the "Hoop tossing," or "Hoop La," which is seen on nearly every "midway." The game is a pretentious affair and as it is open on all sides, a great many players may be accommodated at one time.

The drawing shows the "Hoop Tossing" game in operation. A large wooden platform is surrounded by a railing. On the platform are two or three dozen wooden blocks, each covered with velvet, or other cloth. On top of each block rests a prize of recognized value—a watch, a safety razor, a vase, or a vanity case. The player is provided with seven light, wooden hoops for the sum of ten cents. These he tosses at the wooden blocks and if he succeeds in "ringing" a block, the prize upon it becomes his property.

The "customer" invariably tosses his seven hoops without success. He easily "rings" one of the articles, and thinks that he has won a prize, but the operator informs him that the hoop must "ring" the block upon which the prize is set. The player thereupon takes seven more rings and again "tries his luck." But somehow or other, the ring will never completely encircle the block. No matter how cleverly the player tosses, one annoying corner of the block will always prevent the hoop from falling over.

There is a tantalizing fascination about the game of "hoop tossing" that makes the player "come back for more" and the game proves a big money making proposition for the operator. It is hardly necessary to state that the player never wins, unless the operator wishes him to and the latter is rarely of a philanthropic turn of mind.

The operator, who is "in the game" to make all the money he can, is not content to rely on the law of averages. He resorts to a "gaff," or secret contrivance, which makes it impossible for the player to throw a "ringer."

The block upon which each prize rests is not a solid piece of wood, covered with velvet, as it appears to be. It is, in reality, made up of several layers of wood, as shown in the explanatory diagram. These layers are not firmly held together. They are quite loose, but are held in position by the velvet that covers them. When all of the layers of wood are flush and in proper alignment, the hoop will pass over the block quite easily. The operator demonstrates this fact by setting a hoop over the block, or even by lifting the block from the platform and passing the hoop over it. When he replaces the block on the platform, the operator by a simple, natural movement of his fingers, pushes the center layer of the block out of position. As the velvet covering is not overtight, this operation is an easy matter. It serves to make the slide a trifle longer—just enough longer in fact to prevent the hoop from passing over the block. It then becomes impossible for any one to win a prize, no matter how skilled a tosser he may be. At any time, however, any hoop may be passed over any block, simply by pushing the layer back to its normal position.

To make the game more attractive, the operator has a number of extra hoops, slightly larger than those which he hands out to his "customers." When he wishes to "throw away" a prize, a confederate makes his appearance among the onlookers. Such a confederate is called a "capper" or a "shill." The operator hands him the larger hoops and the "capper" easily "rings" a prize, which he returns to the operator after the crowd has gone.

In some localities, the "hoop tossing" game is barred because every player does not receive some return for his money. In such places the operator distributes collar buttons and small articles about the platform between the wooden blocks. He hands the player a number of hoops and says "Toss until you win." Of course the player tosses for the large prizes, but after a few failures, one of the hoops is bound to roll over one of the cheap articles and the player must accept it as his "prize."

Your Problems

BY MARY GORDON

Dear Mary Gordon: I am coming to you for help. This is my trouble. About a year ago I met the man I love more than I dreamed I ever could care of anyone. He also said he loves me.

We parted three months ago. We returned our letters, yet he came to see me and wanted to talk to me. He knew I cared and I think that's the trouble, Mary, I showed my emotions unwisely. He has been going with another girl since we broke up and he told me he liked her but she was not the type of girl he could marry.

He asked me to forget him for the present only in a friendship way until he knew his own mind. He said we should write and be friends but not be sentimental for a while. Mary, do you think I am doing unwisely by writing friendship letters to him when perhaps he writes love letters to the other girl?

Don't tell me to forget him, I can't. I've tried so hard but I cannot tear this terrible love out of my heart. What shall I do, he has treated me wrong but he has been sorry and I could forgive him because I love him so.

Please do not put this in the W. P. B. I'm so unhappy, I don't know what to do, and I know you'll try to help me.—Blue and Broken Hearted.

A. No, I wouldn't tell you to forget him. There's still quite a bit of hope for you. And if I were you I'd make a fight for him. I wouldn't yield him tamely to the other girl. Write him the friendly letters he wishes. Don't overstep into sentimentality, however. And I wouldn't be too prompt about answering his notes, if I were you. You were unwise once in display of your emotion—make up for it now by wisdom. Most men like the girl who isn't too eager to be caught. As long as she is about a step ahead of his, he is interested. When she waits for him, sometimes, the verve is gone.

Dear Maary Gordon: As a frequent reader of your enjoyable corner of wisdom, wit and fancy, may I impose on you to the extent of using you as an emissary to carry my opinion to the fair Amazon of pencilled and rouged lips and eyebrows, the ardent feminist (I should say Zealot) Asparia?

Why such derogatory declamations against Lincoln for his apparently excessive usage of huge words and ponderous phrases. Frankly I think the majority of readers enjoy Lincoln's contributions and your exception only proves the rule.

Ego? Yes Lincoln seems to be endowed with some, however that is preferable to the hollow brained wilted minded hair plastered cake eater type in my estimation.

I also note that e'en thou fair Aspasia dost dain to use words of more than three syllables and a line altogether lengthy for one so youthful.

Happily I am a married man, so Lincoln's views along with the Brute's and other worthy writers opinions make good material for fun, thot and philosophy for me, with the main theme of entertainment uppermost.

But why all the extreme views from so many? Where is the happy medium?

Would I were cupid to send two shafts into the hearts of Brute and Aspasia and forever link their fates together. Forever or a day? I would willingly wager that the intellect would have rather a merry set to overcoming Brute's bungling obstacles.

Perchance with the Brute's order to scrub the basement the fiery Aspasia would compromise by scrubbing a potato.

As for Brutes views I should more heartily endorse them were he to condemn the strutting collared imitator with flaunting bell bottoms as disparagingly as he does the candy crazed party petted paternal pampered lounge lazy demon dancing jazz crazed flapper.

Would that all eighteen-years-old feminine genders were as fair as my better half so that eyebrow pencils, rouge and lip stick were passe

Nothing is quite so annoying not to say disgusting as to see some amateurish and over-zealous endeavors on the parts of both the flapper and cake eater to improve? on natures work and invariably bungle the job.

Allah be praised my wife is neither an example of down trodden drudge laden womanhood or an exponent of modern flapperdom.

I thank you.—Cosmopolitan.

A. I'm always glad to receive the "happy medium" letters. I think it must encourage others, too, to realize that such a thing as a satisfied married pair exists.

Dear Mary Gordon: Accept your invitations? Of course. We'd jump at it!" We're all crazy to know each other, I know. I would suggest that you have an entertainment of some sort, furnished by some of the guests —as a pantomime by Lincoln entitled "How I Won Hope," or a short discussion by Jess on "Being a Girl" But enough of this.

May I beg the use of your column to "rail" at Jess?

I will start out by saying that I am a girl, (not inferring it) and I don't believe you are. My reasons are numerous and overwhelming (?)

First: Did not Mary Gordon, wonder of the age, weaken your argument at the very "commencement" by revealing the similarity of your hand writing to that of a college idol of former years?

Your ideas, I must say, are very advanced for a girl of your age. Wherever did you get them? Of course, now if you were a boy, it could be easily explained. There's no telling what a boy may take into his head.

Of the idea of little girls "stepping out," I might say. If you are a boy, you must like 'em that way; if you are a girl, you don't know much! According to my idea, little girls of twelve and fourteen ought to be taking their dolls to school yet and going to bed at seven-thirty (laughs are in order, dear readers!) instead of taking joy rides with "sheiks" of (shall we say?) somewhat questionable characters. The labyrinth of life is far too complicated for such young minds to grapple with. If you are a girl of any years at all (and good judgment or common sense) you will agree with me.

But if the present state of affairs continues to exist, it will soon be that babies in arms will be carrying on advanced flirtations, and asking their friends to "go for a joy ride on my new Kiddy Kar."

And so you believe in kisses of respect? I've tried to, goodness knows I have. But it doesn't seem to work, some way. Won't you try to convince me? I'm ready to be converted, but you must quiet my conscience first. I believe you are the person (did I say girl?) who sits not very far away from me in a certain English class, and who writes awfully interesting and clever things.

Please, Jess, don't think me cattish But you are so impossible! Your outlook on life is so totally masculine, and—oh! please don't die laughing It's much cheaper to live, they tell me. And think of all those who eagerly await your letters thru the Journal, How they would miss you, and poor little Billy. What would she do without you who have given her such encouragement.

Oh, I feel you are a boy, Jess! Yes, I'm sure of it. Why? (Woman's intuition, assisted by Mary. You can't deny it. As I said before, I'm a girl, and proud of it.—Tra La.

P. S. When you run out of pink stationary, let me know, I've loads of it I'd like t oget rid of.

A. I had to cut your letter down some, dear. I disliked to do it, because it's interesting but there are many other readers clamoring for admission to the column and we must give them all a chance.

Dear Mary Gordon: I have written to you before and I think you are solving a great many troubles and I am sure all of your readers would be terribly disappointed if anything should force you to stop your work

Now Mary what would you do with a fellow that does nothing but talk about his other girls when he is with you? I get awfully angry at him but yet I can't find it in my heart to stop liking him. What am I to do?

I should like to know if all the fellows of today go with girls just for what they can get out of them. Do you think the fellows just want to love and kiss a girl all the time or do they go with a girl for what they can find in her that is really worth while?

And another trouble of mine is that I am getting tired of going with the fellows I have been going with for the last three months and I want a change. But how am I to go about changing? I don't know many people here to introduce me and how am I to get acquainted? I am sure you think I am a very impatient girl but I get so tired of waiting for a fellow really worth while. Please give me some advice as where to look for my "Lochinvar" if possible.—"Babe."

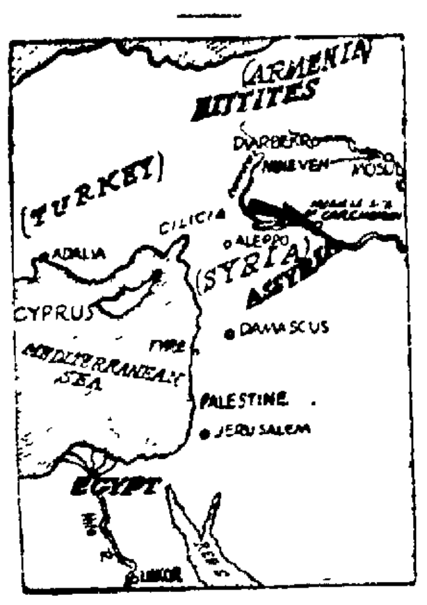
I think I'd try to steer the conversation skillfully into other channels. Or if that doesn't work, why don't you reciprocate by telling him about other boys you know and like?

A girl is sort of puzzled more than once in a while by the way the fellows act, isn't she? They all like to find something really worth while in a girl, anyhow.

There is no way to get acquainted outside the accepted channels—introductions by friends, church, fraternal organizations, etc. Extend your circle of feminine friends and the men will come later.

Journal would just about go out of business if we didn't have our "corner," woludn't it?

ROMANCE



Dispatches from Luxor, Egypt, tell of the discovery of correspondence between the widow of King Tut-Ankh-Amen and the king of the Hittites after King Tut had just died The queen, the correspondence shows, dispatched an ambassador to the king of the Hittites, who just then was beseiging the city of Carchemish, between Mosul and Damascus, asking the hand of one of his sons. Just as the royal romance was about completed King Ay seized the throne of Egypt and banished the hapless queen. The map shows the places mentioned in the story.

TELLS HOW TO LIVE ONE HUNDRED YEARS

HAPPINESS IN EVERY SONG.

"Sing a song every day and you will live one hundred years or more," says Florence Macbeth. She does and intends to keep on past the century mark "Nobody needs a vocal teacher for this, just sing, on key or off key, a hymn or a comic, sotto voce or aloud and you'll be surprised at how happy it will make you.

Bugs "Get the Gate."

Just as surely as the warm days come, there are certain small critters which are bound to find their way into the best regulated homes.

Even the deadly bedbug is sometimes carried home in clothing, or finds its way in some package that is brought into the house.

Ants may swarm in a little later and moths are right now at their most dangerous stage.

Queries have come to the department about household pests, and under this general head the following remedies for specific cases are given in the hope that they will help those who have inquired about ways to prevent and eliminate these various undesirables.

Bedbugs — Kerosene, benzine, or gasoline forced into the cracks and sprayed over the surface of the infested places.

Buffalo bug, or buffalo moth—Take up carpet and clean thoroly out of the house, then spray with gasoline or benzine, and lay in sun and air. Scrub floors thoroly with soap suds, taking care to clean out all corners and crevices, then spray with gasoline, benzine, or kerosene. If there are cracks in the floor they should be filled before the rug or carpet is replaced. Closets should be treated in the same way, and sulphur candles burned in these while the clothes are airing, with help eliminate the moths.

Silverfish—These attack books and papers and starched clothing and can be eliminated by using about 1 teaspoon of powdered white arsenic mixed with 1-2 cup of flour. Make a thin paste by adding boiling water, spread on small pieces of cardboard and when dry put them where the silverfish have been found Be very careful in making this paste, as the arsenic is a deadly poison.

Ants—Kerosene, benzine or gasoline sprayed in the places where the ants enter will keep them away, and if the nest can be found, pour kerosene on it and cover tightly. Be careful of fire when using these oils. Tartar emetic mixed with a little flour is cheapest of all and said to be a sure cure for ants of every kind.

Moths—Right now shake and brush every woolen garment or blanket that has been undisturbed for any length of time. Cold storage is the only absolutely safe way for valuable furs, but ordinary garments which have been cleaned and wrapped in newspaper which has been pasted together at all cracks are practically safe.

My Hair
Grows finer, thicker every year
By Edna Wallace Hopper
At my ripe age, my hair is such as any girl might envy. Heavy and luxuriant, fine and clean. I have never had gray hair, never falling hair, never a touch of dandruff. And every year, despite my age, it grows more beautiful.
It is my greatest glory, admired by all who see it. Yet I have stood in the limelight for 32 years as a musical comedy star.
Beautiful at 57
I owe this to my mother. She said, "Science knows some way to beautify the hair. Let us find it." So we searched the world until we found the best that science offered.
Mother died at 57 with hair like mine today. Never a hair turned gray. I used what she used, and with like results. Scores of my friends have done likewise, and all have this beautiful hair. So I am convinced that millions can enjoy these benefits, and I am going to help them do it.
Hair is stifled
Experts tell me that hair health depends on a healthy scalp. An oil called Sebum accumulates there, grows hard and clogs the pores. Dandruff attacks the scalp. Then the stifled hair [illegible] deteriorate or perish.
The pigment which gives hair its color becomes stifled in a like way. Then some hair falls out, some loses its color, all ceases to thrive. Just as flowers wither and perish when stifled by weeds.
So those scientists in France gave me the formula I use. It combats the dandruff, softens hardened oil, stimulates the hair roots, fertilizes the scalp. They told me it would multiply the beauty of my hair, and it certainly has done so.
With an eye-dropper
I call this formula my Hair Youth. I apply it with an eye-dropper once a day—just enough to dampen the scalp. It takes but a moment, and it doesn't muss the hair.
Now I offer this formula to all. I hope and believe it will bring to millions what it brought to me. I have never met anyone who has found a hair help to compare.
Edna Wallace Hopper's Hair Youth sells everywhere at 50c and $1, with eye-dropper Also my Facial Youth—my famous liquid cleanser. Also my Youth Cream—my fruity cold cream. Also my White Youth Clay. My Beauty Book comes with each.
I hope that all who want lovely hair will see what my Hair Youth does. If the first bottle fails to please you, your dealer will return the price.—Advertisement.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Surrender.

"Look here, Marcella! We're engaged, aren't we? Then we must allow me to take some of your troubles off your shoulders."

Warwick Treman was the speaker. He had come upon his lady-love weeping in sheer perplexity at her little desk, with a sheaf of unpaid bills before her.

"It's dreadful!" She dabbed her eyes with her handkerchief. "We'll be summoned to appear in court if I can't do anything! And the gas has been cut off; and the butcher's boy doesn't come any more for orders, and the grocer threatens to sue us, and I expect the bailiffs will walk in at any moment and take possession! And dad doesn't understand! He sits in his study, poring over his books, and writing learned essays, and not in the least realizing the—the sword that's hanging over our heads!"

Treman managed to keep back a smile. Helplessness in others was a puzzle to him. Inwardly he despised Marcella's father, as an impractical, self-absorbed dreamer, with no real sense of what he owed his daughter.

But it pleased him that the girl herself should be in such a quandary. It put her in his power.

Besides, he was masculine enough to appreciate helplessness in a woman. To a certain etxent, it flattered him—the strong man.

"Let me take matters in hand, little girl!" he said kindly sitting down beside her, and picking up the bills. He scanned them with a keen, quick eye. "The tradesman and probably your servants too, have been systematically robbing you while you were away. Those accounts are exorbitant."

Marcella sighed. What a useless, reckless creature she had been! Moreover, she had had no right to go away and leave her father, just for her own selfish enjoyment! Her conscience pricked her sharply.

Why couldn't she have stayed at home, and kept an eye on things? Why couldn't she have studied the stock market, and the investment columns, and been some financial help to the old man?

It was too late now....

Warwick Treman slipped an arm about her waist. The action was done gently, tenderly, and Marcella felt her bruised heart soften towards him. In comparison with that fickle, cruel, "someone else", how kind he was!

"Something must be done at once", he said, slowly. "You have a bank account, Marcella?"

She nodded, saying ruefully:

"But it's overdrawn! The bank itself is dunning me for money!"

He smiled at her helplessness. The protective instinct, dormant even in ruthless males like himself, rose to the surface.

"I intend to make settlements on you and your father, so you won't object to my paying into your account, today, for a start, a sum of—say—one thousand pounds?"

Marcella drew back, startled.

"As a—a gift?"

He nodded.

"And why not? The settlement will be much larger, but you need immediate money. And as we're going to be married——"

The girl felt the web tighten.

"If you'd let me look upon it as a loan?"

A crafty look came to his face. It was just the merest flicker, and she did not see it, luckily.

"I don't care how you look on it, my dear, as long as it helps you to happiness."

Quick tears sprang to her eyes.

"You're an angel of goodness, Warwick. A loan, then, it shall be."

"But—we are engaged, Marcella, aren't we? Last night you said——"

She bowed her head. She wasn't going back on her word. And she was sure—quite sure—that in time she would grow to care quite deeply for this kind generous man.

Didn't love beget love? Wasn't an engagement with him—the sense of definite obligation—the surest way to blot the memory of the other from her mind and heart?

He wrote the check out in her presence.

"Now—sign your name on the back, dear, and I'll hand it in at your bank. You have your own check book? Good! Then write out all the checks for these accounts, and post them off, and there will be plenty of money in the meantime, behind you. Tomorrow morning at ten o'clock I'll be around in the car to take you down to Lady Mary Warrington's country-place, where troubles will be forgotten and we'll rusticate to our hearts' content!"

He came, on time. But it was nearly eleven before they started. Treman was in a fever of impatience to get the girl away before Miles Holden's phone call should come thru.

But at last they did set off.

In the car he produced the engagement ring and slipped it on the third finger of her left hand. It was a magnificent solitaire, and blinked up at Marcella with a glacial eye.

"How gorgeous." She tried to sound enthusiastic, but her heart was leaded all the same. Warwick was kind and generous and rich, but—where was romance? Her dreams?

It was early March and already the woods showed the gold of primroses and the blue mist of young, sweet violets.

The drive was long, broken by an interval for lunch. And after the meal was over, they were delayed by carburetor trouble, so that it was five o'clock before they reached the big stone gate of Lady Warirngton's country home, sped up the avenue, and found their hostess seated amid a crowd of guests in the large, old-fashioned hall, dispensing tea.

"How perfectly lovely to see you both!" Lady Warrington bounded forward in her usual awkward fashion, jerking the tea-tray so that several cups spilt part of their contents in the saucers. "Marcella darling, you look frozen! Here—this way—to the fire!"

She pulled the girl over to the great log-fire that was sputtering and creckling cheerily, drew off her gauntlet gloves, and proceeded to rub her hands.

Instantly, of course, she sighted the magnificent diamond on its slendor circle of platinum.

Tact and reticence were not her forte. She gave an excited squeal.

"An engagement ring! Marcella! Warwick! Why, how perfectly romantic! I'm positively thrilled!" She held Marcella's hand up to the light. "I'm sure I congratulate you both! I'm so delighted! You were just made for each other!"

AGED SHEIK TELLS STORY

DAVIS ACCUSED OF MARRYING TWENTY-TWO WOMEN.

Says He Did Not Wed That Many, Since in Some Cases He and Bride Signed Bookstore License.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., April 27.- Charles W. Davis, seevnty-four year old Civil war veteran today broke the silence he has maintained since his arrest on a charge of bigamy and grand larceny that has resulted in twenty-two women, in various parts of the country, claiming him as the husband who deserted them.

Puffing reflectively at an ancient black briar, the spruce, white haired veteran sat on a cot in his cell, where he is serving a three-year sentence for grand larceny and spun out a tale of matrimony conquests and heart affairs which rival those of Casanova.

"I have courted women all over the world. Yes, and lived with many of them as their husband," Davis began. "But I deny that I married twenty-two women as the police claim. I did not legally marry that many—and in some cases the bride and I just signed a license which we bought in a book store and let it go at that."

The veteran, who had been grumpy, stubbornly refusing to speak of his case before his conviction on a charge of having married Mrs. Anna Seegar of Wilkesbarre and disappearde with her jewels, waxed voluble The picturesque white head tilted back, eyes half closed in reminiscense he sent clouds of smoke pouring thru the little window of his cell, and told his life story, which is partly corroborated by letters from women, in Ohio, Illinois, New York and New England whom Davis is marired.

The women's letters said Davis had deserted them, taking money, jewels, some times clothing—in one instance the bridal night dress.

"I deny that I acted in such a way," the prisoner said seriously. "In every case these women were poor and lonely, and I supported them, gave them presents, brought joy into their lives."

The case of manner and cultured voice of the veteran was in contract to tales of his adventures.

"I was born near Lake George, New York, in February, 1849," he said. "My grandfather was a supreme court judge and my father was a minister and later became president of university. I went to school there.

"I fought in the Civil war. Then I roamed the world as a soldier of fortune."

The shabby, stooped figure in prison clothes, accused of running off with old women's ear rings and purses, was forgotten. Young Davis, breaker of hearts, reeled off his conquests while the shadows of the cell bars lengthened across the stone floor.

Davis' story takes that romantic youth to Europe—there were the thousands he spent upon a dancer in the Cafe De Paris of Madrid; the woman in the opium den on the Barbary Coast, and the blushing brides he took in the middle west.

hTe veteran took his eyes from the ceiling for an instant and focused them uncertainly upon the interviewer, brushing a pale hand across his face as tho trying to come back to the present century.

He told more details of how he bought the names of women from a matrimonial agency.

"Fifty for fifty cents, I got them," he said with a bland smile. 'I took up with some of them, but they've no reason to complain. They all were willing—and I treated them fairly.

"Sometimes we got a license and wrote in our names. That was good enough for most of them."

During his three years term, Davis hopes to produce a set of memoirs.

A New Life.

One bit of good fortune always seems to follow another. Now that Evelyn had come into her inheritance they found a note summoning Willows back to his former position.

"Well, if that isn't fate!" laughed Evelyn as they read the note together. "I think you're wiser, dear, to go right on with your work, then you can never complain that my fortune queered your career. I won't stop you from being president of the bank!"

"What shall we do with all this junk?" asked Willows, pointing to all their newly acquired furniture. "Do you think we could sell it with the bungalow?"

"Do you think I would sell it?" countered Evelyn, going to her husband and placing her hands on his shoulders. "Stanley, dear, there is a big attic in Aunt Edna's town house and I'm going to store every bit of our furniture there and when I get haughty and proud and act like Clarice Burton or the Vanderwigs I'm going up in the attic and look at our first honeymoon furniture."

"But moths and dust and dirt will soon ruin our beautiful furniture," objected Willows. "That sounds very sentimental and sweet to talk about keeping it forever, but I think it would be far more sensible to dispose of the stuff and put the money we get in the bank."

"I see you're living right up to that old budget system," she laughed. "But I'm going to keep our furniture, just the same. All this money and sudden acquisition of property might turn my head, and then I really have another motive. Our furniture is not going to be sold at all! I am going to do a lot of welfare work now that I have so much leisure and when I meet a sweet young girl who is going to marry a nice young man with a modest income I'm going to give them our furniture, the furniture that made us such a lovely home and which meant so much to us in our first days together."

"There you have a brilliant idea!" confessed Willows. "That is all right and I only hope that they may be as happy as we were and may meet with the same good fortune.

"Well, I'm going back to my old position today, but how are you going to put in the time?"

"I'm going to the town house and see that things are kept up the way Aunt Edna had them," replied Evelyn. "I shall retain the butler, Cecile and the cook. But I think I shall hire a new chauffeur, for I remember he used to give me heart disease every time he drove about in the city. And then I'm coming back to the bungalow and see if I can sell the bungalow to those people you told to come out here."

"All right, go to it," said Willows, kissing his wife goodby as he hurried on to his bank duties.

Evelyn made her way to the dowager's former home and looked about at her new home surroundings. For many years she had lived in this home with her aunt and enjoyed its beauty and refining influences. Then had come her elopement with Willows and her new life in a cheap flat, and later a bungalow bought on the easy payment plan. When her aunt disinherited her and then died, leaving in a will all to charity, the hope of riches and luxuries fled from her mind. She foresaw a simple life and the dismissal of her former society friends. But she loved Willows so much that it was all worth while. Then came the great surprise. It was reported there was a second will, and with a little research among the personal effects of the dowager a second will was found in the library, leaving all to her.

Now she stood in the drawing room of her town mansion and planned how she would furnish a country home where she and Willows might spend at least six months of the year. She had won in love and been lifted out of her new humble environment to the luxurious settings to which she had always been accustomed in early life.

She held a brief conversation with the butler and cook, informing them that she would occupy her new home at the end of the week, and then hurried back to the bungalow to dispose of the little love nest which had brought them so much happiness and good fortune.

Tomorrow—The New Tenants.

DEBATE WORLD COURT ISSUE

Spokesmen for Both Sides to Deliver Speeches on Subject in the East.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The debate over the world court issue will continue today when spokesmen for both sides of the question deliver speeches on it.

Secretary of State Hughes in an address tonight before the American Society of International Law will back up President Harding's position as outlined in New York Tuesday.

Senator Watson of Indiana, speaking before the American club in Pittsburgh, will reply to the president on behalf o fthese republicans who fear American entanglement with Europe as a result of court membership. Watson's reply, however, will be moderate and will decline the challenge of a party split, which Mr. Harding flung at his fellow republicans.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, in a statement assailing the court plan, declared it meant league of nations membership.

TRUCK AND AUTO CLASH.

A Ford touring car and a Nebraska Material company truck collided at Twenty-seventh and Vine streets at 7:30 a. m. Friday. Both machines were damaged but the occupants were not hurt. The truck was driven by J. R. Hansen and the auto by Lloyd J. Goodwin, 2703 South Tenth, according to Detective Schneible, who made an investigation. A front wheel was smashed on each machine. The radiator and front fenders of the Ford were damaged. The drivers claim that hteir view was obstructed by a bakery truck that was improperly parked near the intersection.

Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador, and Ambassador Jules Jusserand of France were decorated with the medals of the national institute of social science at its annual dinner at New York.

ABAS SIGNS ON HIGHWAY

MUST GO FROM RAILROAD AND DIRT ROAD CROSSINGS.

Senate Puts Seal of Approval on Bill That Gives Department of Public Works Control Over All of Them.

The senate law-making machine, running at high pressure Friday morning ground out H. R. 409, which prohibits the placing of any advertising signs within 300 feet of any railroad crossing or within the same distance of an intersection formed by public highways. The latter part was put on by an amendment of Senator [illegible].

The bill is intended to add to the safety of the public. The law, of course, cannot apply to signs on private lands, but it does forbid them on the highways or alongside them. Hereafter no signs may be placed on or along public highways without getting a permit from the state department of public works, which may charge from 25 cents to $5 for each sign. It may also remove any sign it pleases without giving cause, and only where this is done within three months after it has been placed there must needs hand back the permit fee. No sign over ten feet square will be permitted along highways under this law.

The senate also advanced H. R. 609, which gives to the secretary of finance the job of editing all state reports; H. R. 521, which permits the levy in the smaller cities of .4 of a mill levy for sewer upon all taxable property instead of just upon real estate, as now, H. R. 99, which requires township treasurers to pay over to cities and villages within the township half of the road tax collected, and H. R. 592, which provides that three members of library boards outside of Lincoln and Omaha, which operate under home rule charters, may constitute a quorum. Two years ago the legislature cut the number of members from five to nine, but forgot to reduce the number necessary for a quorum, with the result that none could do business unless all were present.

H. R. 719, the salary appropriation bill, which provides money for the constitutional state officers and their deputies, was advanced to third reading, with an amendment tacked on which provided for $10,000 for the next two years for each of the code secretaries.

The senate refused to recall from the house H. R. 488, which was intended to allow the Omaha street railway company to run bus lines also.

NEEDN'T PAY INCOME TAX

WOODMAN ACCIDENT RELIEVED OF $22,000 TAXED TO IT.

Board of Review Holds That Contingent Fund Held to Pay Losses Is Not Taxable as Part of Its Income.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The Woodmen Accident company of Lincoln, Neb., was today relieved from paying $22,000.00 additional income tax assessed for the year 1918. T. S. Allen of Lincoln has been here representing the company in hearings before the income tax unit relative to the matter. The goevrnment contended that the net yearly increase to the contingency fund of the company was taxable as income. hTe company insisted that a tax could not be levied upon that fund inasmuch as it was used solely to pay losses. The income tax unit held that the fund was taxable and the company appealed to the board of appeals and review where with the assistance of some former Nebraska friends now in the department Mr. Allen was able to get an immediate hearing. The board of appeals and review reversed the decision of the income tax unit and held that the increase to the contingency fund of the company is not taxable as income and cancelled the entire tax for 1918.

The tax assessed against the company for 1919 is still under review. The government claims that even with the contingency fund exempt the increase to the indemnity and general funds for 1919 would still be taxable. A hearing will be held by the review board upon this phase of the matter tomorrow.

Our Next of Kin.

Did you ever think how closely we all are bound to those we meet casually—passersby on the street, shoppers in the stores, travelers on the same train?

One woman stands at the corner, waiting. She is disturbed because she thinks she has not received quite the service that she should. She glances significantly at the woman next to her. The return glance shows that they understand each other perfectly.

One traveler has met with a piece of bad luck. If he bears the marks of sincerity twenty travellers come forward ready to help him. They have a fellow traveler's understanding, they feel a fellow traveler's responsibility.

A pedestrian falls on the street and is injured. Immediately dozens gather around him, ready to help. Some one comes forward as leader—there is always one, it seems, in every crowd—and the rest fall in to help until the necessary relief is given. Instinctively they have responded to the call—something which one feels but cannot define—that, by their very passing, came to them.

Our next of kin are all around us.—Milwaukee Journal.

These Days.

WAS A HOUSE OF BONDAGE

FORMER PILLAR OF PURNELL COLONY REVEALS SECRETS.

Claim of Celibacy and Virginity for Followers in House of David Was Joke Within the Colony.

POISON ATTEMPTS.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., April 27.—Attemps have been made to poison informers giving testimony against the House of David. William Nelson, Detroit attorney, told the "one man" grand jury investigation being conducted by Judge Harry Dingeman here today.

Nelson represents former members of the religious cult in suits for damages now pending against the organization.

Two witnesses in these suits within the last month were poisoned circumstances pointing to the cases as resulting from a general plot, Nelson said.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., April 27.—The house of David was a house of bondage, witnesses today told investigators into the religious cult.

Stories of harem life in the supposed virgin house of Shiloh, home of "King" Benjamin Purnell, ruler of the colony were revealed.

The claim of celibacy and virginity made for followers of King Benjamin was regarded as a joke within the colony, a former "pillar" declared.

Benjamin Hill, the chief witness to testify in the probe so far, who was caught while fleeing with Lillian Hanaford, revealed new and startling details of the midnight religious rites in the colony.

Hill, once numbered among the seven pillars" of the colony—the highest executive officers next to the king—declared the revelations of immorality had disillusioned many members of the cult.

He said more than a score were awaiting an opportunity to flee at the time he left with Mrs. Hannaford, his life time sweetheart, whom he could not marry because of orders from "King" Purnell.

Hill said the first word of conditions really existing in the colony was given to him by a sixteen-year-old girl he had married against his will.

"She told me of the immorality among heads of the colony," Hill said. "I had faith in the teachings, however, and doubted her word.

"When my mother died, despite the claim for immortality among members of the colony, I grew skeptical.

"The group weddings were what finally convinced me that the whole thing was a hoax.

"Girls were tricked into marrying men they did not love. The big weddings always came just when an investigation was on. The baby brides from Shiloh were told that if they did not marry, they would be forced to submit to examination by the gentiles to show they were virgins, and that this was against the faith.

"Lillian and I finally decided that even the chiefs of the colony looked upon the claims for virginity and celibacy as a joke, and decided to flee."

OMAHAN PAYS HEART BALM

Fred Young Wooed Kansas Woman Sixteen Years and Then Jilted Her.

TOPEKA, Kas., April 27.—Mrs. Bertha Gil claims she waited sixteen years for an ardent suitor who finally jilted her. She demanded $10,000 damages and got it.

Fred Young, Omaha, traveling salesman, defendant in the case offered no defense but paid the heart balm.

Judge James A. McClure ordered a judgment for the full amount after reviewing a large stack of letters from the drummer covering the sixteen year courtship.

JACK MURPHY DIES SUDDENLY

Well Known Nebraska Sheep Man Has Passed Away.

SHELTON, Neb., April 27.—J. N. (Jack) Murphy, sixty-[illegible] years old, who has been a resident of this community since 1888, was found dead in bed at his home here last night about 11 o'clock by his wife and his daughter, Mrs. D. T. Slattery, when they returned home from an entertainment. A physician was hurriedly summoned and heart failure was given as the cause. Mr. Murphy had his glasses on and a paper lying by his side indicated that he had been reading when death suddenly claimed him. From all appearances he had been dead only a few minutes as the body was still warm.

Mr. Murphy was up town as usual yesterday and appeared to be enjoying good health. He ate a hearty supper and was preparing to retire for the night when the wife and daughter left the house. They had been gone less than three hours when they returned and found his lifeless body.

"Jack" Murphy was born in Benton Harbor, Mich., December 25, 1854, and came to Shelton in [illegible]. He was considered an expert judge of sheep and during his long residence here has been engaged in caring for live stock and fattening sheep for market. Nearly every summer he would go to Wyoming or other western states and take charge of the sheep on the range and in the winter would look after the fattening of lambs here. He was planning on going to Wyoming some time next week.

He is survived by his wife, one daughter, Mrs. D. T. Slattery of this city, and two sons, Roy Murphy of Genoa, Col., and Harry O. Murphy at home.

Bluebird in the Home.

By Sophie Irene Loeb.

The other day I was in a home on the outskirts of the city. It is a modest little cottage and therein lives a mother and her son. They have very modest means and during the war it was the home of one, the mother, and the struggle to keep the wolf from the door was very great.

I had a meal there and somehow it seemed to me I was transplanted into a new world—a world so simple, so sweet, and so joyous.

The dinner was not only well cooked but daintily served, and the same hands that made and served this repast also embroidered the pretty doilies and other linens on the table.

She presided over her table with such grace and graciousness that but for the surroundings I might have believed myself to be in the home of a queen.

And the very intonation of her voice as she addressed her son expressed love, love, love.

In truth, wherever you looked in that bit of a home, there was the constant expression of love before you. In the bedroom every comfort kindly hands could make was to be found. The tenderness with which all his clothes were repaired and kept in order was plainly felt all around.

And he, how much he was trying to make up to his mother for the long period he was away "over there." And how he referred to her as to what a "wonderful soldier" she was, etc., etc.

But I could go on and tell so many details about this house that was so full of the bluebird—the bluebird of happiness.

True, his earnings are small, but their hope is high, and they get so much out of so little, and no trouble seems to matter much.

Not long after this visit, I was in the home of another mother and son in the city. This woman was at her wits' end keeping up with the caprices and the capers of her only boy.

He belonged to the "will not work" kind. And just because his mother had an income he insisted on spending it, in his own way, and did not like any accounting. He very rarely was home to meals, his excuse always being "out with the crowd."

His mother complained bitterly to me of his waywardness and his seeming disregard of her feelings.

Not only this, she said he never thought of her loneliness and she "might as well not have had any son" as far as his being any comfort to her was concerned. They were as far apart as if they were never related. Many a cry this mother has, altho she is surrounded by luxury.

The contrast of these two mothers is very pointed. In the latter case the mother does everything for the son and he cares nothing about her, while in the former the mutual understanding is worth more than radium.

In like manner I have seen in larger homes the same varied atmosphere, and always, always I have found the bluebird in those places where contentment lies; where people have learned to love the simple things, the easy things to get, and are not so eager to reach the big material gain.

In a word, you will always find the bluebird where the spiritual life of the individuals is most developed, where they give some time to reflection and repose and learn to love the beautiful things in life, no matter how little they cost in money.

To have time to see the stars, the moon, and to read a beautiful book and to appreciate a clean table, to remember the birthday, to keep some sentiment above all the sordid things—these are the spiritual things that everyone can have, and such lives are ever in contact with the bluebird.

ATTEMPTS TO END HER LIFE IN OMAHA

Gertrude Sampson Who Went There From Lincoln Few Months Ago Swallows Chloroform at Office.

OMAHA, Neb., April 27.—Gertrude Sampson, 32, 2118 Maple street, employed by the Earl C. Brady Plumbing company, 3224 North Twenty-fourth street, attempted to commit suicide Thursday afternoon, according to police, drinking chloroform in the office of the shop.

She was taken the Swedish Mission hospital where her condition is reported to be critical.

About 12:15 she telephoned Earl C. Brady, who was working on a job at 1910 Chicago street and asked him to return to the shop at once. When he arrived he found her lying on the floor. He called a physician who ordered her removed to a hospital.

No motive has yet been learned for her act.

This makes the fifth attempt at suicide within 24 hours in Omaha, according to police. Two attempts were successful, two were not, and the result of Mrs. Sampson's attempt is still in doubt.

Mrs. Sampson's maiden name was Siddens. She has been divorced from her husband for about two years. She has two children, Robert, sixteen and Don, eight.

Until three months ago when she started to work for the Brady company, she lived with her parents in Lincoln. In Omaha she lived for a time at the home of P. Brady, Earl Brady's father.

Earl Brady said he had accompanied Mrs. Sampson to various places of amusement, but that she had professed no love for him nor he for her. They attended a theater Sunday night. Brady is divorced from his wife.

He said when Mrs. Sampson called him up this afternoon she was crying, which caused him to hurry back to the shop.

Kenneth Waugh, seven year old lad who was reported lost Thursday night returned to his home at 119 South Seventeenth at 10 o'clock the same evening. The boy had left home for school at 8 a. m. Thursday and his mother called police at 9:30 p. m. when he failed to return. The young man made his appearance a half hour afterward.

Mrs. Bessie A. Rumble filed suit Friday in district court against Garfield H. Rumble, asking a divorce on grounds of alleged cruelty, which, according to the petition, was of such an extent that it made the married life undesirable. The wife asks alimony. There are no children. Mr. and Mrs. Rumble were married in Lincoln January 19, 1914.

Inez A. Eckles was granted a decree of divorce in district court Friday morning against Charles O. Eckles. The court found that the defendant abandoned his wife December 1, 1921. A property settlement was made between the parties. There were no children. The wife's maiden name, Halden, was restored by order of the court. Mr. and Mrs. Eckles were married in York February 22, 1913.

Adolph Rozank, 709 South Eleventh street, won first prize in the university engineers' guessing contest as to how many pounds it would take to pull an inch and three-eighths steel rod in two. Rozank's estimate was 189,000 pounds and it took 192,050. Miss Keturah Lowe, 516 North Sixteenth street, came nearest to estimating how much the rod would stretch. Her guess was 1.07 inches and the correct answer was 1.08. Over 200 estimates were made.

The Platte County Independent Telephone company has been given permission to continue its present scale of charges, which expires by limitation May 1, with the exception that instead of adding 5 per cent where payments are not made in advance the spread shall be 25 cents a month between gross and net rates. The company was recently purchased by Lincoln men. The commission says that while the report shows the company made but a small amount of money last year, the present revenues indicate a return of 6 1-2 per cent upon the fair value of $117,000 for this year.

Wade Wilson, who was beaten by 304 votes as the democratic candidate for county attorney by Charles E. Matson, republican, has appealed to the supreme court from the ruling of Judge Stewart of the district court that his failure to file a bond or [illegible] within twenty days after the election ends his election contest. The statute says the contest must be filed within twenty days after the canvass, and that the contestant must also file a bond. It does not say just when this bond shall be filed, but the court ruled that the word "also" definitely linked it up with the filing of the contest itself. Wilson did not file a bond until twenty-four days after the canvass.

COMSTOCK TALKS ON LAWS

Tells Kiwanians Nebraska Might Dispose of Several Hundred Slightly Used Ones.

"Fos disposal of several hundred slightly used laws" was the subject taken by Attorney Wilmer B. Comstock at the noon luncheon of the Kiwanis club Friday at the chamber of commerce. The speaker declared that we have too many laws that for certain reasons are not strictly enforced, and suggested, as a remedy, that a constitutional amendment be adopted declaring that no law, other than appropriaions necessary to defray the expenses of the government, shall be passed oftener than six years, unless upon the petition of a substantial number of citizens declaring the passage of certain laws necessary to carry into effect the provisions of the constitution; that a board or committee of lawyers be appointed by the governor, or be elected, to advise the legislature upon the passage or rejection of proposed laws.

Mr. Comstock gave the following table to show the multiplicity of laws passed since the 1913 legislature:

1913 Legislature.
683 pages general laws.
Constitution and general appropriations.
166 new laws.
98 amendments.

1915 Legislature.
522 pages general laws.
79 new laws.
168 amendments.

1919 Legislature.
1,006 pages outside general appropriations.
67 pages amendatory acts.
692 pages new laws.
[illegible] new laws.
169 pages civil administrative code.

1921 Legislature.
[illegible] pages general laws.
121 new laws.
[illegible] amendments.

The total, in the years stated, of new laws, was 547. The total amendatory acts was 738, or a grand total of 1285 laws and amendments to laws passed between 1913 and 1921.

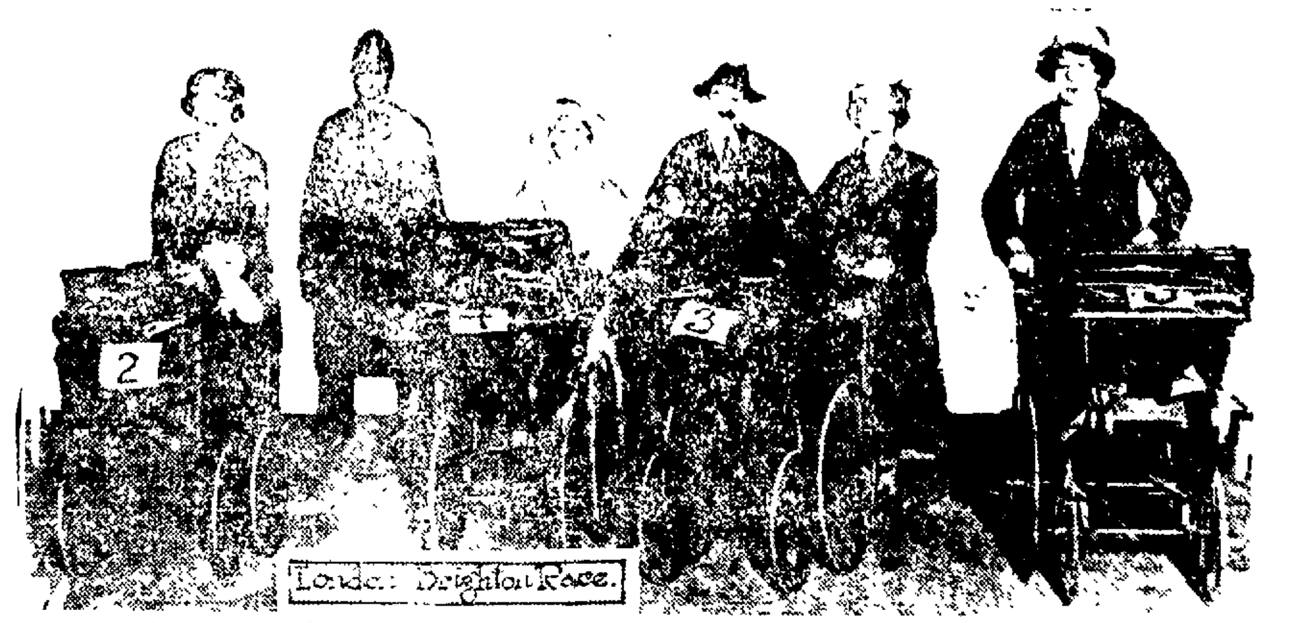
LONG-DISTANCE PERAMBULATOR RACE IN ENGLAND



Dance marathons seem to have America by the ears, but it remained for a Mrs. Edwards, of London, to devise the unique marathon. In response to a challenge from her, five mothers, with five live babies in their perambulators (baby carriages on this side of the pond), engaged in a walking contest from London to Brighton, a distance of fifty-two miles. The race was opposed by physicians, who said incalculable harm might come to both mothers and babies, but the women made the tramp and seemed to suffer no evil effects. Mrs. Lilly Greem, the mother pushing Perambulator No. 3, won the race in 12 hours and 20 minutes.

AWARDED TO LOWEST BIDDER

Contract for New Dormitory for Lutheran Seminary Goes to Harvey E. Wood of Aurora.

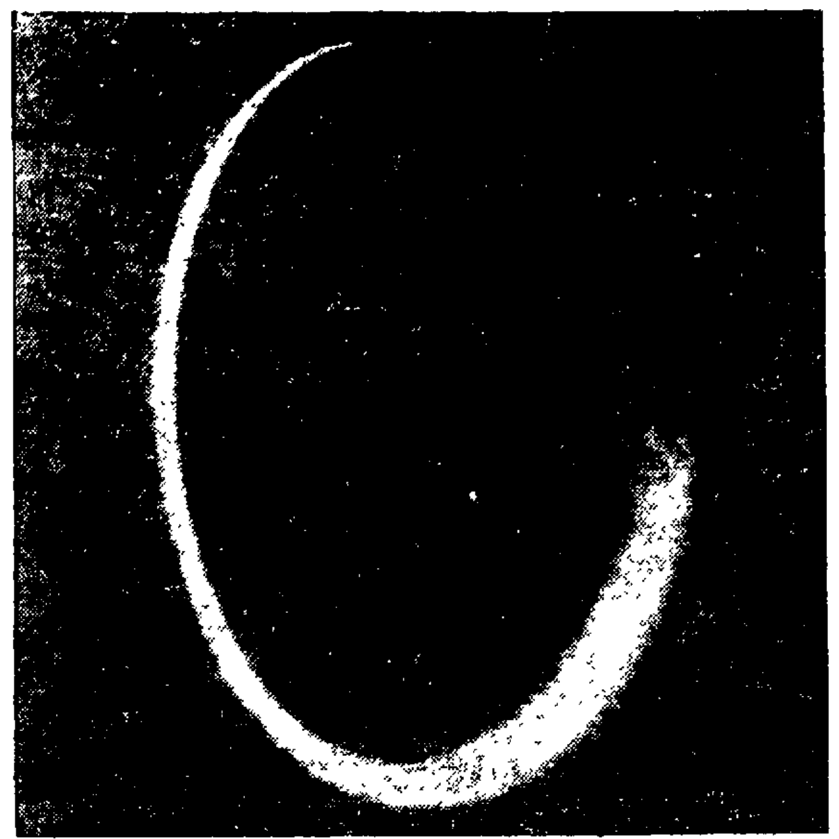
SEWARD, Neb., April 27. — The contract for the erection of the new dormitory at the Lutheran seminary of this city was awarded to Harvey E. Wood of Aurora at $99,607. There were fourteen bids for the general contract, five for the electrical work, and six for the plumbing and heating contract. The bids for the general contract included the dormitory building with a heating plant in the basement, and an alternate bid for the erection of a separate building to house a central heating plant, it being the desire to erect at once a central heating plant, keeping all coal and boilers out of the dormitory.

In all cases, the contracts were awarded to the lowest bidders. In the general contract there was a close contest. Ed Green of Hastings had submitted a bid of $94,900 for the dormitory building, plus $5,900 for the separate housing of the heating plant: while the bid of Harvey E. Wood of Aurora was $95,832 for the dormitory, plus $3,775 for the separate housing of the heating plant. Harvey E. Wood's total, therefore, being $99,607, while tha tof his nearest competitor was $100,800, this contract was awarded to Mr. Wood. This was the closest of all contests. The lowest bidders on electrical work and on plumbing and heating respectively were the Guarantee Electric company of Hastings, and the John A. Anderson company of Omaha.

The largest dimension of the new dormitory will be roughly 169 by 61 feet. Work will be begun within the next week and will be hurried along as rapidly as is consistent with the character of first class work.

The total cost of the dormitory and central heating plant will be approximately $125,000.

"WATCH MY SMOKE," SAYS THIS AIRMAN



Capt. Cyril Turner, English airman, gave Chicagoans a thrill when he climbed to a height of 10,000 feet and wrote "Hello, Chi," in smoke.

"Sky writing" will be a popular form of advertising and also be a great aid to criminal catchers, in the view of Capt. Turner. If a merchant has a product that he wants to move quickly, all he will have to do is hire an aviator to climb into the sky and write out his ad in smoke.

Of course, it will be terribly expensive and more or less prohibitive as a usual thing, but it nevertheless will be popular for instantaneous results.

Turner gave Chicago a sample of what can be done in "sky writing" when he flew to a height of 10,000 feet and wrote out a greeting to Chicagoans that was six miles in length.

Turner flies a tiny pursuit airplane. When he commences to write a trail of white smoke drops out behind the tail of the ship. Each letter is a mile in height.

Police can use the stunt as an aid in locating wanted crooks.

LATEST MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 27. Grains closed lower on the Chicago board of trade today, largely due to more optimistic crop reports and profit-taking.

Demand for export wheat slumped after the Modern Miller declared winter wheat is progressing well in the southwest with the exception of dry districts in western Kansas. Most wheat in Missouri was declared to be good. The Nebraska crop, the publication said, is poor however, and a low yield is in prospect.

Corn also lost ground near the close as profit-taking began. There was some selling due to the lower cash market and better crop reports. The commission house demand was moderate. Many of the shorts changed to July. Export demand, like in wheat, fell off.

Oats was dull and the market was in sympathy with other grains. Weather news was generally favorable. Provisions were irregular but were given some support by higher hog prices.

CHICAGO, April 27.—A sharp drop in prices on the Liverpool market caused grain prices to decline at the opening of the board of trade today.

Wheat declined as a result of prospects of greater Argentine shipments; rains in Queenslands and New South Wales relieving a threatened drouth.

Corn strengthened after the initial dip. While weather conditions in the southwest were more favorable for planting, receipts fell off.

Oats was practically featureless, with little change in prices.

Grain Market Opinions.

J. M. Simpson: There may be a little further decline from present prices, but I believe it will be only temporary and that advantage should be taken of it to buy wheat and corn.

Thomson-McKinnon: Declines should be taken advantage of to make purchases.

Logan & Bryan: Conditions justify a conservatively bullish position.

Clement Curtis & Co.: Realizing sales brought about the setback.

Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: The reaction leaves the market in a much healthier position.

E. Lowitz & Co.: We believe the advantage is decidedly favorable to holders.

Stein-Alstryn: Bull markets usually reduce after making new highs.

Harris, Winthrop & Co.: News is a little more conflicting.

Hulburd, Warren & Chandier: We look for higher prices.—Lamson.

Chicago Tribune Report.

CHICAGO, April 27.—The markets were called upon yesterday to take heavy profit-taking sales and it would not be surprising to see a further setback before this grain is digested.

The general impression is general that values will work higher with technical setbacks from time to time.

Heavy buying in May wheat and selling in July wheat was a feature of the trading at times. It created the impression that those with May wheat sold were disposed to get over into the July. There was also considerable buying of July and selling of September by other interests.

Theer is said to have been a clean-up of several millions of bushels of cash corn held in the east, exporters taking it from western holders. Good buying of May and selling of July has been in evidence for three days by cash interests. Charters for three cargoes aggregating around 750,000 bushels, have been made for Buffalo and Georgian bay.

Oats fail to create much buying enthusiasm, altho the shipping demand from the south is fairly good.—Lamson.

Foreign Cables.

LIVERPOOL, April 27.—Wheat opened today, ½@⅝d lower; wheat at 2 p. m., May 1⅛d lower, July ⅞d lower, October 1¼d lower; wheat closed today, May ⅝d lower, July 1⅛d lower, October 1⅛d lower.

BUENOS AIRES, April 27.—Wheat closed here last night, unchanged; wheat opened today, ⅛c lower. Corn closed here last night, ½c lower; corn opened today, unchanged.—Lamson.

Export Grain Demand.

CHICAGO, April 27.—Export sales yesterday: Wheat, around 1,000,000 bushels, partly durum, with a few loads of hard winters at the gulf. Corn, 100,000; rye, 200,000.—Lamson.

Wall Street Journal Review.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Another cut in gasoline prices today found the stock market in a quite different position than it was in the beginning of the [illegible] of oil shares when the general list was thrown into a condition of irregularity two weeks ago. Professional operators attempted to capitalize the development as they have done on the [illegible] of the previous reductions. The offerings today were absorbed without the slightest disturbance to the market as a whole.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Stocks were stimulated in early dealings by the rise in the reserve ratio of the whole federal reserve system to the highest level of the year at 77 per cent, against 75.5 per cent for the previous week. Rediscounts for all banks declined $7,000,000, while for the New York [illegible] the drop was $11,000,000. The [illegible] of the [illegible] was reassuring, in view of the [illegible] call money to 5 per cent in the [illegible] session, which was largely due to [illegible] in connection with [illegible] U. S. Steel, Consolidated Gas

Not an Expert.

A judge was passing sentence on a man, and in the course of his preliminary remarks he referred to him as "a professional glar."

The prisoner raised loud protests from the dock.

"Here", he exclaimed "I dunno what you mean by callin' me a professional burglar. I've only done it once before an' I've been caught both times."

The judge beamed upon him.

"Oh, I did not mean to say," he remarked in his suave manner, "that you were eminent in your profession"—Chicago News.

WALT MASON

Racing.

As I went chooing up the road, James Whiskers tried to pass; his flivver seemed to feel the goad when he stepped on the gass, and thru its ancient joints there flowed all sorts of pep and sass. "Now by my halidom," I cried, "I'll show this James some speed; the road is long, the road is wide, we'll have a race, indeed; just watch my good old tumbril slide like some gerfalcon freed." There was no reason for the burst of speed that started thus, but I was full of wienerwurst and proud of my old bus; in every race I would be first, I'd beat the other cuss. There was no reason why this James should try to pass my boat; to higher, nobler ends and aims his life he should devote, and he should shun all giddy games that rob man of his goat. We both were chumps, I see it now; James Whiskers sees it, too; I have a poultice on my brow, and he has one or two; we did not see the vagrant cow till 'twas too late to slew. And so we struck her, fore and aft, while hitting fifty miles; and how the High Foolkiller laughed, how gaudy were his smiles! And now chirurgeons ply their graft with crosscut saws and files. "Now, by St. Bride," I say, with sighs, "that race will be my last; in days to come I'll be more wise than I've been in the past"; and while I weep and moralize I'm in a plaster cast.

Auto Pie-Wagon.

Life on the open range seems to have bred in the stockman and cowpuncher the Indians' aversion to "devil wagons" and "smoke chariots" and long after the farmer of the middle west turned his stable into a garage, the men of the range still regarded motor cars askance, says the April Popular Mechanics magazine in an illustrated article. The oldtimers declare that the last note in the passing of the old west has been struck by the appearance of the motor truck as a substitute for the timehonored mess wagon.

It was somewhat of a shock to those accustomed to the old method of spring branding, when the round-up crew of a big Wyoming outfit appeared on the range accompanied by a motor truck to carry the cowboys' beds and cooking utensils, but the "gasoline pie wagon" as it was termed covered many a mile of sage-brush country, and proved a great success.

MEN AND THINGS

Nebraska sentiment, so far as it has been expressed in the past, has been overwhelmingly against any trafficking with the league. The ease with which Hiram Johnson, anti-league leader, cleaned up the state primaries and the smashing majority Harding got over Cox, league protagonist, proved this. How we can use the machinery of the league without becoming a part of it is a puzzle. Supporters of the league have claimed that the changing conditions and the necessity of restoring European markets to the farmer has resulted in a changed sentiment toward it. There has been no test of this. Perhaps the public reaction to the president's declaration that we enter the court created by the league may give a line on this.

A social philosopher at our elbow says that the sharp criticism of the girls of today is largely because of the greater prevalence than ever of petting parties, but that this is not to be taken as any proof of a lowering of the moral standards of the young women. His idea is that the 1923 girl is a whole lot more sophisticated than ever were girls in the past, and that while she may permit familiarities that would have sent the Victorian maiden into a series of faints, those who travel with her know just how far they can go. He suggests that the reason why girls kiss more freely is that they have a better sense of fair play than their predecessors and are unwilling to "sponge" dinners, rides and the like off their boy friends without some return. Boy, page Mary Gordon.

We haven't heard what has become of the matter since, but a few weeks ago we noted that the Oklahoma house, by a vote of 38 to 33, inserted an amendment in the free textbook bill that prohibits the purchase of any book or copyright teaching "the materialistic conception of history or the Darwinian theory, as opposed to the teachings of the holy Bible." It was argued that if the state was going to furnish free books to the school children it should have the right to say what kind of books it would pay for, and if others wanted other kinds of books they had the liberty of getting them. The argument that apparently clinched it was that the function of a school book as that of a school teacher is not to preach religious doctrine or irreligious doctrine either.

Governor Bryan insists that the fifty thousand majority that he got represents the condemnation of the code that he preached in the campaign. He overlooks entirely the two most powerful factors that contributed to his election. One of these was the desire on the part of foreign-borns who did not like the Reed-Norval law to punish Senator Randall for having supported it, and this went so far that dignitaries and ecclesiastical representatives of the church gave orders to members to vote for Bryan. Neighbors and old friends of Mr. Randall frankly told him so to explain their adverse vote. The other was the belief of the wets that when Mr. Bryan said he would abolish the state sheriffs' office he meant more than to discharge Gus Hyers.

What constitutes a critic? One who can accurately diagnose the strength or weakness of whatever it is that the scalpel or lancet is applied to, or the ability to write smart, clever things? We wonder. The brightest writing done today is by those who list themselves as literary critics, and yet they do not appear to be able to tell much about the books they discuss. It may be that we are more interested in books, but art and music criticism seems to us to lag far behind in the sense that their formulas of words and vocabulary of phrases are not much changed.

Schopenhauer was of the opinion that five-sixths of the people are blockheads or knaves. He was himself smart, well educated, and with money and leisure he acquired the usual habit of mind of people so endowed, he came to believe himself superior to the ordinary run of men. Now if there is one fact that impresses itself upon men it is that five-sixths of them are neither blockheads or knaves. Laying aside the noisy radicals and the stupidly prejudiced, who form so small a part of the whole, you will find a very large percentage of men and women honest and intelligent. It may be that Schopenhauer was unfortunate in his choice of associates and that you and I have been fortunate. Yet neither situation would change the essential fact, that no world with only a sixth of the people honest and intelligent could possibly make any such progress as this world has, and that progress has been accentuated more and more as education is diffused.

Negotiations are under way between New York bankers and the Oriental Development company, a semi-official corporation in Japan, involving the lending of $20,000,000 American capital to be used in development projects in Korea.

BRAIN TESTS

5 Minutes to Answer This.

Take a spout, add a small spiked wheel, subtract a mason's implement, add a buffoon, add a slippery customer, add an elastic wooden weapon subtract congealed water, subtract an anatomical joint, add the fruit of the oak, subtract a painful thickening of the cuticle and resulting letters will spell the name of one of Job's daughters.

Answer To Yesterday's.

In the problem of the field which contained just as many acres as it required twelve-foot long rails to build a fence three rails high to inclose it, we find the rails to be of a very accommodating length, as it requires just 43,560 rails, which is just the number of square feet to an acre, or the number of linear feet on one side of the field One rail cut into twelve pieces would build a three-rail fence around one square foot, therefore the answer is found to be as 1 is to 43,560
